differential marking as applied to direct objects has long been discussed as one of the characterizing traits of many romance languages there is however wide consensus that a detailed investigation into the nature of this phenomenon raises numerous challenges both at the empirical and theoretical level many questions are still being raised regarding which precise morpho syntactic strategies count as differential object marking whether the data can be unified and subsequently how they are to be unified formally and theoretically additionally a thorough investigation of this phenomenon is still needed for many romance languages and especially at the micro variation level this volume brings together original papers addressing various aspects of differential object marking in romance languages focusing on micro variation from both a descriptive and formal perspective touching on diachrony language contact synchrony and using a large set of methodologies for the last 20 years the dominant form of user interface has been the graphical user interface gul with direct manipulation as software gets more complicated and more and more inexperienced users come into contact with computers enticed by the world wide and smaller mobile devices new interface metaphors are required the increasing complexity of software has introduced more options to the user this seemingly increased control actually decreases control as the number of options and features available to them overwhelms the users and information overload can occur lachman 1997 conversational anthropomorphic interfaces provide a possible alternative to the direct manipulation metaphor the aim of this paper is to investigate users reactions and assumptions when interacting with anthropomorphic agents here we consider how the level of anthropomorphism exhibited by the character and the level of interaction affects these assumptions we compared characters of different levels of anthropomorphic abstraction from a very abstract character to a realistic yet not human character as more software is released for general use with anthropomorphic interfaces there seems to be no consensus of what the characters should look like and what look is more suited for different applications some software and research opts for realistic looking characters for example haptek inc see haptek com others opt for cartoon characters microsoft 1999 others opt for floating heads dohi ishizuka 1997 takama ishizuka 1998 koda 1996 koda maes 1996a koda maes 1996b

since the advent of syntactic cartography left sentence peripheries have begun to take center stage in linguistic research following the lead of rizzi 1997 much work on left peripheries has been focused on italian whereas other romance languages have attracted somewhat less attention this volume offers a well balanced set of articles investigating left sentence peripheries in spanish some articles explore the historical evolution of left dislocation and fronting operations while others seek to assess the extent and the limits of variation found between different geographical varieties and registers of the contemporary language moreover the volume comprises several case studies on the interfaces between syntax semantics and information structure and the implications of these for pragmatic interpretation and the organization of discourse cross linguistic and typological perspectives are also provided in due course in order to position the analyses developed for spanish within a larger research context
