Late Fertility : Its Causal Effects on Health of the Newborn and Its Implications in Fertility Decision Process

this doctoral thesis is devoted to the study of the effects of late fertility on health of the newborn and to the implications of late fertility in the fertility decision process late fertility is defined as the reproduction process after 30 years old the interest lies as well from the maternal age point of view as from the paternal age point of view the first part is devoted to the study of the determinants of infant morbidity and mortality with a particular attention to the parental age without neglecting the other determinants the originality of this part is located from the methodological point of view we construct a structural model of infant morbidity mortality in order to isolate the causal effect of late fertility by a structural model we mean a model which represents a set of causal relationships represented mathematically by a multi equation model and graphically by directed acyclic graphs as a complementary approach a chapter of the thesis is devoted to an exploratory model highlighting the role of the extreme values rather than average values traditionally of interest in most statistical analyses both methods are tested with hungarian data individual registration forms of livebirths and infant deaths 1984 1984 and 1994 1998 and the hungarian casecontrol surveillance of congenital abnormalities 1997 2002 the second part analyses the effect of parental ageing in the fertility decision process we try to determine whether the detrimental effect of late fertility on health of the child and on fecundity of the couples intervene in the preferences for a child we assume that parental age influences the preferences for a child through effects on the desire for a child and on the beliefs in the capacity of reproduction of a healthy child this hypothesis is tested using the data from the national survey of family growth united states 2002 and from the fertility and family survey hungary czech republic and belgium

the initial plans for this book sprang from a late afternoon conversation in a hotel bar all three authors were attending the 1996 meeting of the population association of america in new orleans while nursing drinks and expounding on a variety of topics we began talking about our current research projects it so happened that all three of us had been entertaining the notion of writing a book on state and local population projections recognizing the enormity of the project for a single author we quickly decided to collaborate had we not decided to work together it is unlikely that this book ever would have been written the last comprehensive treatment of state and local population projections was done by pittenger's excellent work projecting state and local populations 1976 many changes affecting the production of population projections have occurred since that time technological changes have led to vast increases in computing power new data sources the development of gis and the creation of the internet the procedures for applying a number of projection methods have changed considerably and several completely new methods have been developed
