the death of nelson mandela the great south african fighter for freedom in december 2013 prompted several colleagues within the world council of comparative education societies community to come together to think about the significance of his life and his work for education this book is the result of that coming together the contributing authors reflect on what his life the commitments he made and principally the values he took into the struggle for freedom in south africa mean for education the point of departure for the book is that of honouring the man it begins with the argument that the values for which he stood namely the unconditional dignity of all human beings respect for difference and principally his lifelong commitment to justice have a special significance for how we as inhabitants of an increasingly connected and interdependent world conduct our personal lives our relationships with one another and with the material and living space which surrounds us it is an ecological approach as the world moves into a twenty first century where paradoxically we know so much and yet appear to understand so little and so find ourselves struggling to create social lives in which all of us can feel respected can offer respect to others and live lives free of fear and anxiety the values for which he stood have specific relevance for how we do the important job of teaching and what we put into it mandela poses deeply provocative questions about the kinds of lives we seek for ourselves and for everybody else around us the issues raised by the role of language in education are some of the most important and contentious faced by education systems across the globe language is embedded in the concepts of nationhood and identity and is therefore directly linked to the very social and political fabric of a country in a climate of increasing globalisation development and mobility of populations nations around the world are concerned with the tension between cultivating a sense of cultural and linguistic cohesion and making use of the linguistic diversity that exists in every country and region this book examines the implications and impacts the dilemmas and potential for language education in relation to education systems and wider society split into three key parts it considers current issues in language education including the role of language in maintaining power and inequalities in encouraging participation and inclusion and in challenging the status quo different approaches to language education around the world the potential for language to provide opportunities for the disadvantaged illustrated by case studies of three cities this recent volume of the internationally respected world yearbook of education continues the tradition of offering a wide range of international perspectives from leading commentators on a universal concern the material amassed here will be essential reading for teacher educators education researchers and school leaders across the world

Democratizing Higher Education 2015-03-12

this book was written with the purpose of analyzing the challenges faced by the post apartheid government in south africa with regard to reform of higher education it covers the apartheid context of higher education resistance to the system and its ultimate demise democratic processes in post apartheid reform agenda and how this agenda was emptied of its radical content as a result of global and local pressures highlighted are key constraints in the reform process including the compromise pact agreed upon between the apartheid government and the ruling african national congress the rapidly globalizing environment underpinned by neoliberal principles within which south africa s transition took place shifts in macro economic policies of government towards neo liberal policy the inheritance of the bureaucracy and the inexperience of new government officials these are presented in a narrative style that combines the author s experience the voices of key players involved and important data from a range of documentary sources this is the first single authored book in post apartheid south african that has systematically looked at higher education reform this unique interview book stems from the days when south africa s notorious apartheid regime collapsed it was written in january of 1988 and i present the talks as they were recorded then it brought me straight into the heart of the cultural resistance while simultaenously revising anthropological research too i looked at the contribution the arts could play in terminating racial segregation and asked respondents if they would use their creative activity in this regard rather than practicing art for arts sake the book includes a detailed bibliography a comprehensive set of footnotes and a black and white photo of respondents at once evocative and suggestive this exemplary book gives me hope that educators and scholars across the world will seize the opportunity to self reflect and enlarge and enrich both their research and their practice in ways that will markedly contribute to the revitalisation of the higher learning in the twenty first century the urgency of the need for revitalisation of both research and practice in this domain of inquiry cannot be overstated prof clifton conrad university of wisconsin madison usa

this book examines the intersections between education identity formation and language in post apartheid south africa with specific attention to higher education it does so against the backdrop of the core argument that the sector plays a critical role in shaping re producing and perpetuating sectoral class sub national and national identities which in turn in the peculiar south african setting are almost invariably analogous with the historical fault lines determined and dictated by language as a marker of ethnic and racial identity the chapters in the book grapple with the nuances related to these intersections in the understanding that higher education language policies overt and or covert largely structure institutional cultures or what has been described as curriculum in higher education institutions together the chapters examine the roles played by higher education by language policies and by the intersections of these policies and ethnolinguistic identities in either constructing and perpetuating or deconstructing ethnolinguistic identities upon which the sector was founded the introductory chapter lays out the background to the entire book with an emphasis on the policy and practice perspectives on the intersections the middle chapters describe the so called white universities black universities and middle man minorities universities the final chapter maps out future directions of the discourses on language and identity formation in south africa s higher education
