research on late antique and early medieval migrations has long acknowledged the importance of interdisciplinarity the field is constantly nourished by new archaeological discoveries that allow for increasingly refined pictures of socio economic development yet the perspectives adopted by historians and archaeologists are frequently different and so are their conclusions diverging views exist in respect to varying geographical areas and scholarly traditions too this volume brings together history and archaeology to address the impact of the inflow and outflow of migrations on the rural landscape the creation of new settlement patterns and the role of migrations and mobility in transforming society and economy such themes are often investigated under a regional or macro regional viewpoint resulting in too fragmented an understanding of a widespread phenomenon spanning eastern and western europe the book takes steps toward an integrated picture of territories normally investigated as separate entities and critically establishes grounds for new comparisons and models on late antique and early medieval transformations

this phd thesis explores the use of symbolism in european integration during the 1950s and 1960s the thesis argues that political elites staged the early european communities the 1952 ecsc as well as the 1958 eec and euratom as the representation of a united europe and so tied them to a vision with much momentum in post war europe this symbolic role of the communities transcended their technocratic set up and their narrow economic policies it made them distinctive among the many post war european organizations empirically this thesis focuses in separate parts on three settings where the communities were staged as the united europe the communities parliamentary assemblies first part the communities diplomatic activities second part and the communities polycentric seating arrangements third part this thesis deals with a wide array of actors who for different reasons participated actively or tacitly in the staging of the communities the news media and occasionally also civil society actors governments and administrations parties and parliaments across the original six member states as well as those of the communities external partners britain and the united states conceptually this thesis presents a cultural history approach to european integration it aligns itself with a new strand of research in european integration history that aims to go beyond the much advanced diplomatic history of the european communities and to add to it an interest in discourses identities and symbols with its study of symbolism this thesis seeks to bring together the literature on the diplomatic history of the european communities and the intellectual history of the european idea it also seeks to help historians define the nature of the european communities and assess their place in post war european history this thesis is based on the papers of jean monnet and walter hallstein two key figures of the early european communities and archival materials from the historical archives of the european union in florence as well as the diplomatic archives of france and germany britain and the united states prior to the european union eu 2004 2007 enlargement there were several predictions that this event would hamper progressive decision making within the eu on environmental policy it was believed that the new member states had adopted eu rules as a consequence of the eu s conditionality and consequently they would rather slow down the reform speed in the field after accession in this book mats braun offers an up to date account of how post communist member states have handled policy initiatives in the field of environmental policy after accession using detailed case studies of how bulgaria the czech republic poland and romania dealt with two different eu policy initiatives reach and the climate energy package he explores whether social norms and the process of socialization can help us understand why the track record of new member states in the area of environmental policy is more varied than was originally envisaged prior to enlargement the singer songwriter in europe is the first book to explore and compare the multifaceted discourses and practices of this figure within and across linguistic spaces in europe and in dialogue with spaces beyond continental borders the concept of the singer songwriter is significant and much debated for a variety of reasons many such musicians possess large and zealous followings their output often esteemed politically and usually held up as the nearest popular music gets to high art such facets often yielding sizeable economic benefits yet this figure per se has been the object of scant critical discussion with individual practitioners celebrated for their isolated achievements instead in response to this lack of critical knowledge this volume identifies and interrogates the musical linguistic social and ideological elements that configure the singer songwriter and its various equivalents in europe such as the french auteur compositeur interprète and the italian cantautore since the late 1940s particular attention is paid to the emergence of this figure in the post war period how and why its contours have changed over time and space subsequently cross cultural influences and the transformative agency of this figure as regards party and identity politics in lyrics and music often by means of individual case studies the book s polycentric approach endeavours to redress the hitherto anglophone bias in scholarship on the singer songwriter in the english speaking world drawing on the knowledge of scholars from across europe and from a variety of academic disciplines including modern language studies musicology sociology literary studies and history

Shaping the New Europe 2004-04-30 europe rehoused was one of the most influential housing texts of the 1930s and is still widely cited written by the housing consultant elizabeth denby 1894 1965 it offered a survey of the nearly two decades of social housing built across europe since the end of world war one with the aim of informing british policy makers as a reviewer declared it has a decidedly propagandist flavour denby was a leading figure in housing debates in the 1930s adopting a line in sharp critique of what she saw as the entirely materialist approach of state housing policy denby advocated the incorporation of social amenities alongside well designed and equipped flats and houses ideally sited within urban areas by the late 1930s she was a pioneering advocate of the concept of mixed development europe rehoused is divided into two parts the first considered the origins of the housing problem of the inter war decades which denby dated to the onset of the industrial revolution she then examined the various national factors which influenced the problem climate post war economy and the nature of land ownership finally she discussed the financial aspect the bodies responsible for house building and the nature of the subsidies available for building this was very much a schematic survey and the second and largest part of the book was devoted to individual studies of european practice and discussed two winners in the war two losers and two neutrals sweden holland germany vienna italy and france this section was completed with a concluding chapter in which she compared continental work with the british system and the lessons that could be learnt in this country from abroad although denby s book was not the only one of its sort its importance lies in its polemical nature and its advocacy of a rehousing policy which would become widely adopted after wii significant too is that the book is the voice of a woman who had assumed a significant status as a housing expert in the inter war decades walter gropius who wrote the introduction to the us edition of the book observed that the book carried the weight of perfect expertness such voices have for too long been overlooked yet denby was formed part of a very strong tradition of women reformers who worked to re shape the inter war and post war british built environment
