The second amendment to the United States Constitution protects the right to keep and bear arms. It was ratified on December 15, 1791, along with nine other articles of the Bill of Rights in the District of Columbia. The second amendment explained a well-regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state. The right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.

The original text of the second amendment of the Constitution of the United States is: "A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed."

The second amendment to the Constitution of the United States, adopted in 1791 as part of the Bill of Rights, provided a constitutional check on congressional power under Article I, Section 8, to organize a national militia. The second amendment is often referred to as the right to bear arms. It is one of 10 amendments that form the Bill of Rights, ratified in 1791 by the U.S. Congress. Differing interpretations of the amendment in the 2008 case District of Columbia v. Heller led the Supreme Court to hold, after a lengthy historical analysis, that the second amendment protects an individual right to possess firearms for historically lawful purposes, including self-defense in the home.
