Francis Bacon 2021-03-23 coalitional behaviour is central to the italian system of government but has been largely neglected by research as a result coalitions in post war italy have been viewed as simply unstable short lived and incohesive in this book the author corrects this one sidedness by analysing italian coalition politics as a continuous and dynamic process his comprehensive interpretative approach takes account of other new developments in coalition studies and relates his subject both to the literature on italian politics and to the comparative study of party systems in liberal democracies an introductory section places italian coalitional behaviour in a theoretical and comparative context this inductive framework is then used as a reference for examining the historical institutional motivational internal socio political and environmental dimensions of the phenomenon narratives of social change between 1968 and 2000 showing that by the end of the period class was often seen as an historical identity related to background and heritage and that many felt strict class boundaries had blurred quite profoundly since 1945 class snobberies went underground as many people from all backgrounds began to assert that what was important was authenticity individuality and ordinariness in fact sutcliffe braithwaite argues that it is more useful to understand the cultural changes of these years through the lens of the decline of deference which transformed people s attitudes towards class and towards politics the study also examines the claim that thatcher and new labour wrote class out of politics arguing that this simple and highly political narrative misses important points thatcher was driven by political ideology and necessity to try to dismiss the importance of class while the new labour project was good at listening to voters particularly swing voters in marginal seats and echoing back what they were increasingly saying about the blurring of class lines and the importance of ordinariness but this did not add up to an abandonment of a majoritarian project as new labour reoriented their political project to emphasize using the state to empower the individual
