A little more than seventy-five years ago, Kate L. Turabian drafted a set of guidelines to help students understand how to write, cite, and formally submit research writing. Seven editions and more than nine million copies later, the name Turabian has become synonymous with best practices in research writing and style. Her manual for writers continues to be the gold standard for generations of college and graduate students in virtually all academic disciplines. Now in its eighth edition, A Manual for Writers of Research Papers, Theses, and Dissertations has been fully revised to meet the needs of today's writers and researchers. The manual retains its familiar three-part structure, beginning with an overview of the steps in the research and writing process, including formulating questions, reading critically, building arguments, and revising drafts. Part II provides an overview of citation practices with detailed information on the two main scholarly citation styles: notes-bibliography and author-date. An array of source types with contemporary examples and detailed guidance on citing online resources. The final section treats all matters of editorial style, with advice on punctuation, capitalization, spelling, abbreviations, table formatting, and the use of quotations. Style and citation recommendations have been revised throughout to reflect the sixteenth edition of the Chicago Manual of Style, with an appendix on paper format and submission that has been vetted by dissertation officials from across the country and a sociological perspectives the text helps students move beyond individual perspective to gain a sociological perspective this is a book on metaethics and moral epistemology it asks two fundamental questions i is there any such thing as non relative moral truth and ii if there is such truth how do we come into epistemic contact with it roughly the first half of the book is aimed at answering the first question its animating idea is that we should take our ordinary tutored moral judgments seriously judgments typified by our conviction that it is clearly true that some acts policies social norms et al are morally right or wrong permissible or impermissible praiseworthy or condemnable etc no matter when where or by whom they are performed in order to provide a firm conceptual basis for such judgments the book develops a theory of moral truth based on a theory of moral facts the account of moral truth and moral facts is further grounded on a theory of moral properties in short the book develops a theory of moral realism roughly the view that there are indeed non relative first order moral truths the second half of the book is aimed at answering the second question above building squarely on the metaethical theories developed earlier the book argues for a non empiricist theory of justified moral belief and knowledge pivotal to this project is a careful analysis of various forms of moral skepticism by which i mean any conception of morality substantially at odds with the general contours of our ordinary moral thinking all such skepticisms are rejected and in their place a broadly intuitionist epistemically fallibilist theory of moral knowledge is advanced the conclusion reached is that we have very strong reason to believe that our ordinary moral thinking although certainly liable to error is fundamentally sound this is a book on metaethics and moral epistemology it asks two fundamental questions i is there any such thing as non relative moral truth and ii if there is such truth how do we come into epistemic contact with it roughly the first half of the book is aimed at answering the first question its animating idea is that we should take our ordinary tutored moral judgments seriously judgments typified by our conviction that it is clearly true that some acts policies social norms et al are morally right or wrong permissible or impermissible praiseworthy or condemnable etc no matter when where or by whom they are performed in order to provide a firm conceptual basis for such judgments the book develops a theory of moral truth based on a theory of moral facts the account of moral truth and moral facts is further grounded on a theory of moral properties in short the book develops a theory of moral realism roughly the view that there are indeed non relative first order moral truths the second half of the book is aimed at answering the second question above building squarely on the metaethical theories developed earlier the book argues for a non empiricist theory of justified moral belief and knowledge pivotal to this project is a careful analysis of various forms of moral skepticism by which i mean any conception of morality substantially at odds with the general contours of our ordinary moral thinking all such skepticisms are
