stock markets play a key role in corporate financing in asia however despite their increasing importance in terms of size and cross border investment activity the region s markets are reputed to be more idiosyncratic and less reliant on economic and corporate fundamentals in their pricing using a model that draws on international asset pricing and economic theory as well as accounting literature we find evidence of greater idiosyncratic influences in the pricing of asia s stock markets compared to their g 7 counterparts beyond the identified systematic factors and local fundamentals we also show proof of a significant relationship between the strength of implementation of securities regulations and the noise in stock pricing which suggests that improvements in the regulation of securities markets in asia could enhance the role of stock markets as stable and reliable sources of financing into the future
