there is a profound crisis in the united states foster care system jill duerr berrick writes in this expertly researched passionately written book no state has passed the federally mandated child and family service review two thirds of the state systems have faced class action lawsuits demanding change and most tellingly well over half of all children who enter foster care never go home the field of child welfare has lost its way and is neglecting its fundamental responsibility to the most vulnerable children and families in america the family stories berrick weaves throughout the chapters provide a vivid backdrop for her statistics amanda raised in foster care began having children of her own while still a teen and lost them to the system when she became addicted to drugs tracy brought up by her schizophrenic single mother gave birth to the first of eight children at age fourteen and saw them all shuffled through foster care as she dealt drugs and went to prison both they and the other individuals that berrick features spent years without adequate support from social workers or the government before finally achieving a healthier life many people never do but despite the clear crisis in child welfare most calls for reform have focused on unproven prevention methods not on improving the situation for those already caught in the system berrick argues that real child welfare reform will only occur when the centerpiece of child welfare reunification permanency and foster care is reaffirmed take me home reminds us that children need long term caregivers who can help them develop and thrive when troubled parents can't change enough to permit reunification alternative permanency options must be pursued and no reform will matter for the hundreds of thousands of children entering foster care each year in America unless their experience of out of home care is considerably better than the one many now experience take me home offers prescriptions for policy change and strategies for parents social workers and judges struggling with permanency decisions readers will come away reinvigorated in their thinking about how to get children to the homes they need

family foster care is supposed to provide temporary protection and nurturing for children experiencing maltreatment although it has long been a critical service for millions of children in the united states the increased attention given to this service in the last two decades has focused more on its inability to achieve its intended outcomes than on its successes however as social and political trends and new legislation reshape child welfare policymakers and service providers continue to offer innovative policy and practice options for this child welfare service though use of the service has changed family foster care remains important responding to a widespread sense of the drifting of children in care congress passed the adoption assistance and child welfare act of 1980 this legislation became a key factor shaping the current status of family foster care its goal was to reduce reliance on out of home care and encourage use of preventive and reunification services it also mandated that agencies engage in planning efforts for permanent solutions for foster children yet despite federal mandates and funding the child welfare system has continued to struggle to provide the level of services needed for children to reduce the amount of time children remain in temporary foster care the latest response to these problems the adoption and safe families act of 1997 established unequivocally that safety permanency and well being were national goals for children in the child welfare system to comply with the law public and private agencies are required to initiate significant program and practice changes in the coming years to improve permanency outcomes and child well being in family foster care the central theme of the volume is accountability for outcomes certainly a current driving force in child welfare as well as in other public and private service fields this volume will be of interest to all concerned with the social welfare of children and families at the end of the twentieth century kathy barbell is director of foster care of the child welfare league of america washington dc lois wright is assistant dean at the college of social work university of south carolina columbia
