in adaptive and rewarding interpersonal interactions with others the field of human motivation is rapidly growing but most studies have focused on the effects of motivation on individuals personal happiness and task engagement only recently have theorists and empiricists begun to recognize that dispositional and state motivations impact the ways individuals approach interpersonal interactions in addition researchers are now recognizing that the quality of interpersonal interactions influences consequent happiness and task engagement thus helping to explain previous findings to this end similarly social psychology and relationships researchers have focused on the impact of cognitions emotions and behaviors on people s relationships in their work relationships researchers demonstrate that both contextual characteristics and individual differences influence the quality of interactions many of these studies seek to understand which characteristics strengthen the bonds between people encourage empathy and trust and create a sense of well being after a close interaction this work seeks to integrate the field of human motivation and interpersonal relationships both fields have seen extensive growth in the past decade and each can contribute to the other however no single compiled work is available that targets both fields this is the case in part because only now is there enough work to make a strong and compelling case for their integration in the previous years research has been conducted to show that motivation is relevant and important for interactions among strangers and science teachers relationships in addition developmental mechanisms for these relations are identified and mechanisms by which motivation strengthens people s relationships finally recent work has demonstrated the many implications for interpersonal relationships showing that motivation impacts a range of interpersonal processes from prejudice regulation and objectification of others to empathy and care this book seeks to summarize and organize all these findings and present them in a way that is relevant to both motivation researchers and social and relationship researchers in the 1990s it is no longer news that families do not operate independently from other social organizations and institutions instead it is generally recognized that families are embedded in a complex set of relationships with other institutions and contexts outside the family in spite of this recognition a great deal remains to be discovered about the ways in which families are influenced by these outside agencies or how families influence the functioning of children and adults in these extra familial settings school work day care or peer group contexts moreover little is known about the nature of the processes that account for this mutual influence between families and other societal institutions and settings the goal of this volume is to present examples from a series of ongoing research programs that are beginning to provide some tentative answers to these questions the result of a summer workshop characterized by lively exchanges not only between speakers and the audience but among participants in small group discussions as well this volume attempts to communicate some of the dynamism and excitement that was evident at the conference in the final analysis this book should stimulate further theoretical and empirical advances in understanding how families relate to other contexts
