East of the Cape 2015-06-12 the story of east of the cape conserving eden is a story about nature and people the drama takes place in a region located on the south eastern coast of africa where nature s diversity is manifest rainforest karoo fynbos grassland and savanna are juxtaposed in complex and intriguing ways aptly called eden this region is also home to thicket a lilliputian forest of great antiquity that harbours the ancient stock of many plant lineages found in southern africa's contemporary ecosystems eden is also home to a diversity of human cultures each of which has left its mark on nature from the birth of humankind to the present day the footprint of eden s inhabitants has become progressively heavier for the past 150 years since the onset of south africa's industrial age a growing population and increasing demands on nature have ravaged eden especially its thicket but just as people have been the cause of eden s degradation so too can they provide the solution in east of the cape authors richard cowling and shirley pierce present a blueprint for conservation that seeks to engender a culture of managing natural resources wisely and safeguarding nature and its services for a sustainable eden 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 making inventions the conventional wisdom is that patents should therefore be strictly exclusive rights moreover in practice patent owners are almost never forced to give up their right to exclude others and receive only a certain amount of remuneration with for instance compulsory licensing other economically interesting patent law objectives however include the transfer and dissemination of knowledge mechanisms exist by which the patent owner decides if he or she would prefer exclusive or non exclusive rights for instance the opportunity to declare the willingness to license and create patent pools but it is questionable whether these mechanisms are sufficient and efficient enough in view of the existence of patent trolls and other problems this work challenges the conventional wisdom to a certain extent and makes proposals for improvements
