

its establishment grew out of the concern over an impasse in contemporary and comparative legal scholarship in indonesia and the region in general as a transnational scholarly project the journal provides a forum for legal practitioners and scholars from the republic of indonesia asia and elsewhere to discuss a broad range of issues relating to law as states become more integrated there is a pressing need to respond to the climate where legal social and political issues increasingly cross national boundaries in their impact the journal in its global reach is designed to address these considerations by challenging the orthodoxies that once considered progressive its primary purpose is to provide a new forum for emerging perspectives on international and comparative legal issues especially those that implicate non western regions or cultures in that respect the journal through its publications aims to enrich existing approaches to legal analysis and widen the proper ambit of legal studies in the global south the journal is thus particularly interested in considering submissions that invoke creative outlooks on law and present arguments that go beyond doctrinal analysis we strongly encourage works that aim to generate practical impact in policy making at all levels the journal welcomes theoretical historical comparative and inter disciplinary manuscripts covering legal issues in any jurisdiction as well as notes and book reviews examining the impact of rapidly changing legal regimes on specific areas or sub disciplines of legal studies offers insights into the challenges and prospects in preparing indonesian youth for 21st century living featuring studies focusing on various educational aspects including teachers and teaching schools and the social context of education indonesia is a semi annual journal devoted to the timely study of indonesia s culture history government economy and society it features original scholarly articles interviews through cornell university press s website in july 1996 president soeharto crossed a point of no return small but vocal student groups were staging daily demonstrations to demand reformasi indonesia s byword for democratic reform disturbed by the unprecedented show of dissent soeharto cracked down but by demonstrating that he would cling to power through force the 74 year old president dashed hopes for a peaceful democratic transition the world s fourth largest nation was rolling towards a high stakes political crisis pitting reformers against corruptors islamists against nationalists and the elite against the indonesian people drawing on scores of personal interviews and extensive bi lingual research reformasi relates the course of indonesian politics from 1996 through to the end of 2001 it recounts the collapse of the financial system the downfall of soeharto and the relentless power struggles of an unscrupulous ruling class it unravels the headline grabbing corruption scandals that bankrupted the economy while shedding light on the skullduggery behind much of the country s continuing violence and strife including the trisakti shootings the may 1998 riots and the scorched earth campaign in east timor a full six years after soeharto s july 1996 crackdown the fate of the world s largest muslim country still hangs in the balance reformasi provides fresh perspectives on political islam the prospects for democracy and the implications of military involvement in governance and business above all reformasi demonstrates that demands for reform are strong and enduring but so too is the legacy of soeharto kevin o rourke graduated from harvard university before moving to jakarta where he has worked for eight years as an investment banker consultant and political risk analyst throughout the height of the political transition he scrutinised events first hand by authoring the van zorge report an independent bi weekly journal on politics and economics indonesia is a
