cities have become increasingly important to global politics but have largely occupied a peripheral place in the academic study of international relations. This is a notable oversight for the discipline although one which may be explained by its traditional state centrism, the subjugation of the city to the demands of the territorial state in the modern period and a lack of conceptual and analytical frameworks that can allow scholars to include the impact of cities within their work. Presenting case specific scholarship from leading experts in the field, each contribution guides the reader through the changing nature of cities in the international system and their increasing prominence in global governance. Outcomes the book features case studies on the financial power of cities, city action in the security domain, collaboration of cities in coping with environmental problems, transnational urban regions and mayors as international actors to illustrate if the relationship between the city and the state has changed in profound ways and how cities are empowered by structural changes in world politics. The multidisciplinary and global focus in the power of cities in international relations sheds much needed light on the significance of the reemergence of cities from the long shadow of the nation state. Only by examining the mechanisms that have empowered cities in the last few decades can we understand their new functions and capabilities in global politics.

there is now a palpable sense of optimism about the role of cities and transnational city networks in global climate governance yet amidst the euphoria there is also a sense that the power that has been ascribed to and frequently assumed by cities has been overstated. That the power of cities and city networks to make a difference in global climate politics is not what it appears, this book explores the implications of city engagement in global climate politics, outlining a theoretical framework that can be used to understand the power of cities in relation to transnational city networks, multinational corporations and nation states. The book will be of interest to students and scholars of transnational governance, global environmental politics and climate change.

this book develops a new way of comparing and understanding urban politics across national borders. The author's approach, called modes of governance, emphasizes governing alignments and their agendas. Applying this perspective to four cities in England and the United States, Alan Digaetano and John S. Klemanski compare the effects of postindustrial and urban political transformations and link these to trends in the wider political economy, economics, demographics and state structure. Influence the choices that ruling alliances face in urban politics. Power and City Governance examines the role of these forces, then evaluates urban development in Boston and Detroit and in the English cities Birmingham and Bristol. The book compares the origins and development of pro-growth, growth management and social reform governing alignments and drawing on over 200 interviews with local leaders provides a clear perspective on the power structure in each city. Unusual in its integration of comparative theory and practical analysis, Power and City Governance contributes significantly to the long standing debate over the structure of community power.

the scholarly purpose of this manuscript is to provide a resource for academics and researchers looking into cities, space and power in emerging economies. It also takes into consideration the relationship between emerging economies and developing contexts as well as the lessons that may be shared between them. This book presents a unique perspective and aims to highlight issues not addressed much in writing on the built environment based on substantiation and references to numerous other sources and authors alternative theoretical frameworks for the study of the built environment are developed this is a very relevant contribution at this time especially as cities will most probably go through transformations in the post covid 19 era our first line of defense against this public health crisis will be in areas of poverty with people who have generally been excluded and urban practices that have been undocumented or labeled as informal the main thesis of the manuscript is that space and power are strongly linked in cities the research results prevalent in the book are original and while the authors consult widely across disciplines the themes are firmly rooted in the built environment fields with a focus on the architectural discipline
