The flowers of literature, or, Encyclopædia of anecdote, a coll. by W. Oxberry 1821 this volume explores the development of literary culture in sixteenth century england as a whole and seeks to explain the relationship between the reformation and the literary renaissance of the elizabethan period its central theme is the common in its double sense of something shared and something base and it argues that making common the work of god is at the heart of the english reformation just as making common the literature of antiquity and of early modern europe is at the heart of the english renaissance its central question is why was the renaissance in england so late that question is addressed in terms of the relationship between humanism and protestantism and the tensions between democracy and the imagination which persist throughout the century part one establishes a social dimension for literary culture in the period by exploring the associations of commonwealth and related terms it addresses the role of greek in the period before and during the reformation in disturbing the old binary of elite latin and common english it also argues that the reformation principle of making common is coupled with a hostility towards fiction which has the effect of closing down the humanist renaissance of the earlier decades part two presents translation as the link between reformation and renaissance and the final part discusses the elizabethan literary renaissance and deals in turn with poetry short prose fiction and the drama written for the common stage
