richard harvey brown s pioneering explorations in the philosophy of social science and the theory of rhetoric reach a culmination in social science as civic discourse in his earlier works he argued for a logic of discovery and explanation in social science by showing that science and art both depend on metaphoric thinking and he has applied that logic to society as a narrative text in which significant action by moral agents is possible this new work is at once a philosophical critique of social theory and a social theoretical critique of politics brown proposes to redirect the language and the mission of the social sciences toward a new discourse for a humane civic practice excerpt from social civics many excellent textbooks are already available for the teaching of civics why should another be added to the number wherein does this book differ from the rest what are its outstanding features the plan this book covers a wider range than most texts it includes not only a survey of governmental framework and functions but many topics which are ordinarily spoken of as questions in economics sociology and international relations the propriety of including such topics scarcely requires a defensive argument now adays for the old lines of demarcation in the social sciences are rapidly breaking down the problems of our complex modern civilization pay no heed to technical boundaries they are the joint product of political social and eco nomic forces no one can get a grasp of them if he lets his mind run on a single track a well organized course in civics or in the problems of the society
