UNHCR Global Trends 2011 2012 in 2012 forced population displacement continued to affect large numbers of people worldwide unhcr s 2012 global trends report analyses statistical trends and changes from january to december 2012 for the populations for whom unhcr has been entrusted with a responsibility by the international community these people include refugees asylum seekers returnees stateless persons and certain groups of internally displaced persons idps and are collectively referred to as persons of concern introduction

World at War 2015 displacement in the twenty first century is urbanized the united nations refugee agency unhcr the world s largest humanitarian organization and the main body charged with assisting displaced people globally estimates that over 60 per cent of refugees now live in urban areas a proportion that only increases in the case of internally displaced people and asylum seekers though cities and local authorities have become essential participants in the protection of refugees only three decades ago they were considered to sit firmly beyond unhcr s remit with urban refugees typically characterized as aberrations in the urbanization of forced displacement neil james wilson crawford examines the organization s response to the growing number of refugees migrating to urban areas introducing a broader study of policy making in international organizations crawford addresses how and why unhcr changed its policy and practice in response to shifting trends in displacement citing over 400 primary un documents crawford provides an in depth study of the internal and external pressures faced by unhcr pressures from above below and within that explain why it has radically transformed its position from the 1990s onward unhcr and global refugee policies have come to play an increasingly important role in the governance of global displacement the urbanization of forced displacement sheds new light on how the organization works and how it conceives its role in global politics today A Year of Crises 2011 the book is a rich piece of scholarship that makes a contribution at the levels of history theory and policy and deserves to be widely read and considered alexander betts university of oxford the link between migration and development has risen on the agenda of the international community in recent years and global level dialogues have started in her book saskia koppenberg gives an in depth analysis of the global forum on migration and development gfmd the most important and most widely recognised dialogue she provides striking insights into the theories that lie behind the subjects that dominate the gfmd and identifies the perspectives which have so far been neglected by investigating which migrants are addressed what the dominant development approach is how migrants are expected to contribute to development and who the targeted beneficiaries are koppenberg makes the gfmd accessible to the academic and public discourse with regard to the 2 year assessment process evaluating the gfmd which is set to conclude by the end of 2012 the study provides valuable recommendations for the ways in which a more successful and comprehensive gfmd can be attained in the future koppenberg broadens the perspective and takes a look at other global level dialogues beyond the gfmd the study includes a comparative analysis of the unhcr led dialogue on targeting development assistance tda which discusses the link between forced migration and development this perspective highlights how particular forms of migration and certain kinds of development dominate the debates while others are left out it reveals forced migrants have largely been absent from the gfmd agenda despite the fact that their potential to be agents of development has been acknowledged while identifying the differences and commonalities in the prevalent subjects concepts and theories that link migration and forced migration to development in these two dialogues a migrant centred approach is introduced this guides the reader s view towards the migrants own development and their development perspectives while keeping in mind that in terms of agency vs structure the migration development nexus builds upon the migrants agency based on her study saskia koppenberg argues that the traditional migration and development agenda of the gfmd should be broadened to include marginalised perspectives and to offer a migrant centred approach in order to provide a more comprehensive and effective global level dialogue on migration and development that ensures the migrants well being and leads to the highest possible impact on development

UNHCR Global Trends 2015 the rise and decline of a global security actor investigates the rise of the united nations high commissioner for refugees unhcr as a global security actor it follows the refugee agency through some of the past two decades major conflict induced humanitarian emergencies in northern iraq 1991 bosnia 1991 95 eastern zaire 1994 96 kosovo 1998 99 afghanistan 2001 and iraq 2003 it analyses unhcr s momentous transformation from a small timid legal protection agency to the world s foremost humanitarian actor playing a central role in the international response to the many wars of the tumultuous last decade of the 20th century then as the 21st century set in the agency s political prominence waned it remains a major humanitarian actor whose budgets and staffing levels continue to rise but the polarised post 9 11 period and a worsening protection climate for refugees and asylum seekers spurred unhcr to abandon its claim to be a global security actor and return to a more modest quietly diplomatic role the rise of unhcr as a global security actor is placed within the context of the dramatic shift in perceptions of national and international security after the end of the cold war the cold war superpower struggle encouraged a narrow strategic military understanding of security in the more fluid and unpredictable post cold war environment a range of new issues were introduced to states security agendas prominent among these were the perceived threats posed by refugees and asylum seekers to international security state stability and societal cohesion this book investigates unhcr s response to this new international environment adopting adapting and finally abandoning a security discourse on the refugee problem

Displacement 2013 this revised and expanded second edition of the united nations high commissioner for refugees unhcr continues to offer a concise and comprehensive introduction to both the world of refugees and the organizations that protect and assist them this updated edition also includes up to date coverage of the unhcr s most recent history and policy developments evaluation of new thinking on issues such as working in an integrated operations and within the un peacebuilding commission assessment of the unhcr s record of working for idp s internally displaced persons discussion of the politics of protection and its implications for the work of the unhcr outline of the new challenges for the agency including environmental refugees victims of natural disasters and survival migrants written by experts in the field this is one of the very few books to trace the relationship between state interests global politics and the work of the unhcr this book will appeal to students scholars practitioners and readers with an interest in international relations

Refugee and Others of Concern to UNHCR : Statistics, Trends and Indicators in Selected Countries : 1 January - 30 June 1999 1999 resettlement involves the selection and transfer of refugees from a state in which they have sought protection to a third state which has agreed to admit them as refugees with permanent residence status the status provided ensures protection against refoulement and provides a resettled refugee and his her family or dependants with access to rights similar to those enjoyed by nationals resettlement also carries with it the opportunity to eventually become a naturalized citizen of the resettlement country the statistics presented reflect the number of individuals submitted for departing on resettlement including those who have been submitted to multiple resettlement states re submissions where possible this report analyses the figures over a ten year period 2005 2014 however it only analyses the resettlement needs from 2012 onwards as from that date the methodology for calculating needs changed taking into account the needs of refugees in a protracted situation where resettlement is envisioned over a period of several years

Statistical Yearbook [UNHCR]. 2004 our world is facing an enormous and unprecedented challenge the migration crisis affects nearly eighty million people and represents a humanitarian catastrophe how can we ignore the suffering of men women and children who are forcibly displaced worldwide the book changing stories helps the reader to reflect on the migration crisis from a biblical perspective it evaluates refugee ministry ongoing initiatives among the world s most vulnerable people additionally it analyzes the refugee ministry that the arsenal hill presbyterian church is developing with refugees from syria iraq the congo and vietnam the analysis uses as a framework the best practices for christian ministry among forcibly displaced people document proposed by the refugee highway partnership rhp throughout the book the author answers the following questions how complex is the current migration crisis what does the scripture say about displaced people

Refugees, Migrants, and Development 2011 the global narrative surrounding migrants refugees and people on the move is often fraught with biases misunderstandings and misrepresentations while crucial for informing public opinion media coverage can inadvertently perpetuate stereotypes fuel discrimination and distort realities this leads to a climate where migrants and refugees are often misunderstood marginalized and even targeted with hate speech such narratives hinder efforts for inclusive societies and contribute to the polarization of public debates on migration media representation of migrants and refugees offers a comprehensive solution by bringing together interdisciplinary perspectives to examine and challenge prevailing media narratives critically by inviting scholars and practitioners from diverse fields such as social sciences humanities media communications and government the book aims to provide a nuanced understanding of the complex interplay between media representations and the lived experiences of migrants this book is a vital resource for academics researchers policymakers and media professionals seeking to understand and address the challenges of media representation in the context of migration

An Overview of Protection Issues in Western Europe 1995 sixty years on from the signing of the refugee convention forced migration and refugee movements continue to raise global concerns for hosting states and regions for countries of origin for humanitarian organisations on the ground and of course for the refugee this edited volume is framed around two themes which go to the core of contemporary refugeehood protection and identity it analyses how the issue of refugee identity is shaped by and responds to the legal regime of refugee protection in contemporary times the book investigates the premise that there is a narrowing of protection space in many countries and many highly visible incidents of refoulement it argues that protection which is a core focus of the refugee convention appears to be under threat as there are many gaps and inconsistencies in practice contributors to the volume who include erika feller elspeth guild hélène lambert and roger zetter look at the relevant issues from the perspective of a number of different disciplines including law politics sociology and anthropology the chapters examine the link between identity and protection as a basis for understanding how the refugee convention has been and is being applied in policy and practice the situation in a number of jurisdictions and regions in europe north america south east asia africa and the middle east is explored in order to ask the question does jurisprudence under the refugee convention need better coordination and how successful is oversight of the convention

An Overview of Protection Issues in Western Europe 1995 displacing territory explores the core concepts of territory and belonging and humanizes refugees in the process based on fieldwork with palestinian and syrian refugees in jordan displacing territory explores how the lived realities of refugees are deeply affected by their imaginings of what constitutes territory and their sense of belonging to different places and territories karen culcasi shows how these individual conceptualizations about territory don t always fit the western centric division of the world into states and territories thus revealing alternative or subordinated forms and scales of territory she also argues that disproportionate attention to refugee crises in the global north has diverted focus from other parts of the world that bear the responsibility of protecting the majority of the world s refugees by focusing on jordan a global south state that hosts the world s second largest number of refugees per capita this book provides insights to consider alternate ways to handle the situation of refugees elsewhere in the process culcasi brings the reader into refugees diverse realities through their own words inherently arguing against the tendency of many people in the global north to see refugees as aberrant burdensome or threatening

2004 Global Refugee Trends 2005 in an age of ethnic nationalism and anti immigrant rhetoric the study of refugees can help develop a new outlook on social justice just as the post war international order ends the global financial crisis the rise of populist leaders like trump putin and erdogan not to mention the arrival of anti eu parties raises the need to interrogate the refugee migrant citizen stateless legal and illegal as concepts this insightful research handbook is a timely contribution to that debate

The Rise and Decline of a Global Security Actor 2014-02-20 a thoughtful carefully argued and morally persuasive case for doing more financial times

part call to arms part collection of stories including his own it is a powerful invitation to care about refugees to see them as humans just like you or me who desperately need our help red we are in the midst of a global refugee crisis sixty five million people are fleeing for their lives the choices are urgent not just for them but for all of us what can we possibly do to help with compassion and clarity david miliband shows why we should care and how we can make a difference he takes us from war zones in the middle east to the heart of europe to explain the crisis and show what can be done not just by governments with the power to change policy but by citizens with the urge to change lives his innovative and practical call to action shows that the crisis need not overwhelm us miliband says this is a fight to uphold the best of human nature in the face of rhetoric and policy that humour the worst he defends the international order built by western leaders out of the ashes of the second world war but says now is the time for reform describing his family story as the son of refugees and drawing revealing lessons from his life in politics david miliband shows that if we fail refugees then we betray our own history values and interests the message is simple rescue refugees and we rescue ourselves

The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) 2013-06-17 building on existing debates in international organizations policy and academia this insightful book argues for a broader transnational perspective on the concept of forced migration and its multiple contexts and catalysts it analyzes the different social groups of forced migrants treating them neither as passive victims nor as activist heroes but as social actors under highly constrained conditions

Changing Stories 2020-10-21 this volume sheds new light on the refugees and forced migration at the horn of africa and east africa adopting a multidisciplinary perspective it traces historical structural and geopolitical factors to reveal the often brutal uprooting of people in a region that hosts more than three million refugees and almost six million internally displaced persons idps by doing so it enriches our understanding of the socio economic geopolitical and humanitarian causes and implications of migration and population displacement the book is divided into five parts focusing on different drivers of involuntary displacement and people s uprooting the first part covers geopolitical conflicts rooted partly in the colonial and cold war geographies the second part then focuses on security aspects and conflicts while the third looks at encampment and refugee policies as well as refugee agencies part four highlights issues of forced repatriation and human trafficking lastly part five analyzes the dynamics of refugee camps

Statistical Yearbook 2001 2002 global migration provides a clear concise and well organized discussion of historical patterns and contemporary trends of migration while guiding the readers through an often difficult and politicised topic aimed primarily at undergraduate and master s students the text encourages the readers to reflect on economic processes politics immigrant lives and raises debates about inclusion exclusion and citizenship the text critically highlights the global character of contemporary migration and the importance of historical context to current processes and emphasises the role of gender race and national ideologies in shaping migration experiences using over a decade of their own insight into teaching undergraduate migration courses in the us and the uk and the knowledge and understanding of the subject they have acquired as migration researchers the authors offer an accessible and student friendly manner for readers to understand and explore the complex issue of migration the book features numerous international case studies a chapter dedicated to the perspective of the immigrants themselves as well as key terms and further readings at the end of each chapter both theoretically and empirically informed global migration examines the subject in a holistic and expansive way it will equip students with an understanding of the complex issues of migration and serve as a guide for instructors in structuring their courses and in identifying important bodies of scholarly research on migration issues

Hope for the Afflicted 2023-06-29 a new introduction to a timeless dynamic how the movement of humans affects health everywhere international migrants compose more than three percent of the world s population and internal migrants those migrating within countries are more than triple that number population migration has long been and remains today one of the central demographic shifts shaping the world around us the world s history and its health is shaped and colored by stories of migration patterns the policies and political events that drive these movements and narratives of individual migrants migration and health offers the most expansive framework to date for understanding and reckoning with human migration s implications for public health and its determinants it interrogates this complex relationship by considering not only the welfare of migrants but also that of the source destination and ensuing generation populations the result is an elevated interdisciplinary resource for understanding what is known and the considerable territory of what is not known at an intersection that promises to grow in importance and influence as the century unfolds

Refugees Worldwide 2012-08-03 statelessness is a legal status denoting lack of any nationality a status whereby the otherwise normal link between an individual and a state is absent the increasingly widespread problem of statelessness has profound legal social economic and psychological consequences but also gives rise to the paradox of an international community that claims universal standards for all natural persons while allowing its member states to allow statelessness to occur in this powerfully argued book conklin critically evaluates traditional efforts to recognize and reduce statelessness the problem he argues rests in the obligatory nature of law domestic or international by closely analysing a broad spectrum of court and tribunal judgments from many jurisdictions conklin explains how confusion has arisen between two discourses the one discourse inside the other as to the nature of the international community one discourse a surface discourse describes a community in which international law justifies a state's freedom to confer withdraw or withhold nationality this international community incorporates state freedom over nationality matters bringing about the de jure and effective stateless condition the other discourse an inner discourse highlights a legal bond of socially experienced relationships such a bond judicially referred to as effective nationality is binding upon all states and where such a bond exists harm to a stateless person represents harm to the international community as a whole
