The Works of Aurelius Augustine: Letters. v. 1. Translated by J.G. Cunningham. 1872 1872 the writing of letters often evokes associations of a single author and a single addressee who share in the exchange of intimate thoughts across distances of space and time this model underwrites such iconic notions as the letter representing an image of the soul of the author or constituting one half of a dialogue however justified this conception of letter writing may be in particular instances it tends to marginalize a range of issues that were central to epistolary communication in the ancient world and have yet to receive sustained and systematic investigation in particular it overlooks the fact that letters frequently presuppose and were designed to reinforce communities or indeed to constitute them in the first place this volume explores the interrelation of letters and communities in the ancient world examining how epistolary communication aided in the construction and cultivation of group identities and communities whether social political religious ethnic or philosophical a theoretically informed introduction establishes the interface of epistolary discourse and group formation as a vital but hitherto neglected area of research and is followed by thirteen case studies offering multi disciplinary perspectives from four key cultural configurations greece rome judaism and christianity the first part opens the volume with two chapters on the theory and practice of epistolary communication that focus on ancient epistolary theory and the unavoidable presence of a letter carrier who introduces a communal aspect into any correspondence while the second comprises five chapters that explore configurations of power and epistolary communication in the greek and roman worlds from the archaic period to the end of the hellenistic age five chapters on letters and communities in ancient judaism and early christianity follow in the third part before the volume concludes with an envoi examining the trans historical or indeed timeless philosophical community seneca the younger construes in his letters to lucilius
