much has happened in the newspaper profession and in the schools of journalism since this book was first published ten years ago the newspapers have covered a world war and war periods have always brought the greatest changes in american newspapers have wrestled with doubled costs of production reduced staffs much merging curtailed income and are now deep in the perplexities of reconstruction meanwhile schools and courses in journalism have greatly increased in number enrolment and branches of instruction when the book was presented in 1915 it was the first textbook entirely devoted to the problems and technique of newspaper desk work it has therefore been widely used in classes in copyreading headline writing and make up as well as in newspaper offices its contents have been put to a severe test and some have been found wanting the author himself in using it year after year in class filled many page margins with suggestions for improvement hence in preparation for its tenth anniversary it is well that the book should receive a thorough overhauling to bring it up to date to put in some things omitted before to make it more usable and teachable its general structure has not been changed most of the alterations are in the chapters on copyreading headline writing make up and type but many additions have been made in other chapters class exercises have now been added to each chapter to present in brief much of the technique of teaching as it has developed in the larger schools they are intended to be suggestive not only to the teacher but to independent students and young newspaper workers a bibliography has been added to suggest further reading in the schools of journalism the methods of teaching copyreading have developed during the period since first publication probably more than any other branch and have been somewhat standardized companies and organisations are increasingly using machine translation to improve efficiency and cost effectiveness and then edit the machine translated output to create a fluent text that adheres to given text conventions this procedure is known as post editing translation and post editing can often be categorised as problem solving activities when the translation of a source text unit is not immediately obvious to the translator or in other words if there is a hurdle between the source item and the target item the translation process can be considered problematic conversely if there is no hurdle between the source and target texts the translation process can be considered a task solving activity and not a problem solving activity this study investigates whether machine translated output influences problem solving effort in internet research syntax and other problem indicators and whether the effort can be linked to expertise a total of 24 translators twelve professionals and twelve semi professionals produced translations from scratch from english into german and monolingually post edited machine translation output for this study the study is part of the critt tpr db database the translation and monolingual post editing sessions were recorded with an eye tracker and a keylogging program the participants were all given the same six texts two texts per task different approaches were used to identify problematic translation units first internet research behaviour was considered as research is a distinct indicator of problematic translation units then the focus was placed on syntactical structures in the mt output that do not adhere to the rules of the target language as i assumed that they would cause problems in the monolingual post editing tasks that would not occur in the translation from scratch task finally problem indicators were identified via different parameters like munit which indicates how often the participants created and modified one translation unit or the inefficiency ineff value of translation units i.e. the number of produced and deleted tokens divided by the final length of the translation finally the study highlights how these parameters can be used to identify problems in the translation process data using mere keylogging data
