this book draws on archival oral history and public policy sources to tell a history of foster care in australia from the nineteenth century to the present day it is primarily a social history which places the voices of people directly touched by foster care at the centre of the story but also within the wider social and political debates which have shaped foster care across more than a century the book confronts foster care's difficult past death and abuse of foster children family separation and a general public apathy towards these issues but it also acknowledges the resilience of people who have survived a childhood in foster care and the challenges faced by those who have worked hard to provide good foster homes and to make child welfare systems better these are themes which the book examines from an australian perspective but which often resonate with foster care globally working in a survival school documents how global educational policies trickle down and influence school cultures and the lives of educators and educational leaders the research traces the everyday work and experience of educators within an all boys catholic college suffering an unprecedented decline in enrolment numbers in short it was a school in survival mode drawing on dorothy smith s scholarship on institutional ethnography the authors document how the school operated and how its efforts to survive influenced the daily work of educators institutional ethnography reveals the school as a bounded space subject to a variety of competing local and translocal forces that are historical political and economic in nature exploring the discursive and material effects of policy on both the work and identities of educators the authors illustrate how the everyday experience of being an educator is shaped by marketisation and how leaders engage in stratagems to promote the school as a vehicle of educational excellence and quality to lure clientele building on existing scholarship in educational policy studies and new public management working in a survival school considers how the global marketisation of education systems is experienced in one school fighting to survive this book is of interest to educators school leaders and academics interested in policy enactment the book explores the impact of marketisation on education through the lens of a survival school. it examines how the shift from public to private management has transformed the way schools are run, from the classroom to the boardroom. the authors argue that while marketisation has brought about some positive changes, such as increased accountability and efficiency, it has also led to a focus on performance over pedagogy, and a disregard for the social and emotional needs of students. the book highlights the challenges faced by educators in navigating this new landscape, and the importance of maintaining a balance between market forces and educational values.

in the vein of hannah kent's burial rites the watch house by bernie mcgill is the story of the modern world arriving on rathlin a remote irish island at the very end of the nineteenth century with dramatic consequences for a young woman named nuala as the twentieth century dawns on the island of rathlin a place ravaged by storms and haunted by past tragedies nuala byrne is faced with a difficult decision abandoned by her family for the new world she receives a proposal from the island's aging tailor for the price of a roof over her head she accepts meanwhile the island is alive with gossip about the strangers who have arrived from the mainland armed with mysterious equipment which can reportedly steal a person's words and transmit them through thin air when nuala is sent to cook for these men engineers who have been sent to rathlin by marconi to conduct experiments in the use of wireless telegraphy she encounters an italian named gabriel who offers her the chance to equip herself with new skills and knowledge as her friendship with gabriel opens up horizons beyond the rocky and treacherous cliffs of her island home nuala begins to realise that her deal with the tailor was a bargain she should never have struck

Working in a Survival School 2023-05-31

the book provides a critical analysis of the impact of marketisation on education, highlighting the ways in which it has transformed the way schools are run and the way teachers are treated. it also examines the challenges faced by educators in navigating this new landscape, and the importance of maintaining a balance between market forces and educational values.
