Public Administration 1999 emotional labor continues to attract interest of researchers and practitioners due to its prevalence in organizations and importance on work related processes and outcomes even though considerable research examined outcomes related to emotional labor studies investigating the personal and organizational factors which exacerbate or alleviate use of emotional labor strategies i e surface acting and deep acting are relatively scarce thus in this study we aim to examine the effect of negative affect and negative events on emotional labor process by utilizing personality systems interaction theory 2019s approach kuhl 2000 in this sense we aim to investigate the moderating effects of action state orientation and organizational affect climate on the relationship between affect related factors and emotional labor specifically we hypothesize that the positive relationship between surface acting and high negative affect will be moderated by action orientation and affect climate such that the relationship will be smaller in magnitude for action oriented employees and for employees whose organizations endorsed authentic affect climate we aim to collect data from 100 white collar employees across five consecutive workdays via online survey to accurately account for individual variances and between person effects we will analyze the data by conducting multilevel modeling in mplus 7.1 we will discuss about results and implications considering their contribution to the theory and practice

Public Administration 2013-01-09 it is not thought as such that can move anything but thought which is for the sake of something and is practical this discerning insight which dates back more than 2000 years to aristotle seems to have been ignored by most psychologists for more than 40 years theories of human action have assumed that cognition and action are merely two sides of the same coin approaches as different as social behaviorism social learning theory consistency theories and expectancy value theories of motivation and decision making have one thing in common they all assume that thought or any other type of cognition can move anything that there is a direct path from cognition to behavior in recent years we have become more and more aware of the complexities involved in the relationship between cognition and behavior people do not always do what they intend to do aside from several nonpsychological factors capable of reducing cognition behavior consistency there seems to be a set of complex psychological mechanisms which intervene between action related cognitions such as beliefs expectancies values and intentions and the enactment of the behavior suggested by those cognitions in our recent research we have focused on volitional mechanisms which presumably enhance cognition behavior consistency by supporting the maintenance of activated intentions and prevent them from being pushed aside by competing action tendencies

Outcomes of Action Orientation and Affect Climate on Emotional Labor Process: A Diary Study 2017 death gender and ethnicity examines the ways in which gender and ethnicity shape the experiences of dying and bereavement taking as its focus the diversity of ways through which the universal event of death is encountered it brings together accounts of how these experiences are actually managed with analyses of a range of representations of dying and grieving in order to provide a more theoretical approach to the relationship between death gender and ethnicity though death and dying have been an increasingly important focus for academics and clinicians over the last thirty years much of this work provides little insight into the impact of gender and ethnicity on the experience the result is often a universalising representation which fails to take account of the personally unique and culturally specific experiences associated with a death drawing on a range of detailed case studies death gender and ethnicity develops a more sensitive theoretical approach which will be invaluable reading for students and practitioners in health studies sociology social work and medical anthropology
