ravallion argue that india has probably maintained its 1980s rate of poverty reduction in the 1990s however there is considerable diversity in performance across states this holds some important clues for understanding why economic growth has not done more for india s poor india s economic growth in the 1990s has not been occurring in the states where it would have the most impact on poverty nationally if not for the sectoral and geographic imbalance of growth the national rate of growth would have generated a rate of poverty reduction that was double india s historical trend rate states with relatively low levels of initial rural development and human capital development were not well suited to reduce poverty in response to economic growth the study s results are consistent with the view that achieving higher aggregate economic growth is only one element of an effective strategy for poverty reduction in india the sectoral and geographic composition of growth is also important as is the need to redress existing inequalities in human resource development and between rural and urban areas this paper a product of the poverty team development research group is part of a larger effort in the department to better understand the relationship between economic growth and poverty the authors may be contacted at gdatt worldbank org or mravallion worldbank org

Financial Access of the Urban Poor in India 2017-03-22

this book focuses on the issue of financial exclusion with particular reference to the urban informal sector in india continuing the work of its predecessor the current government of india is also placing considerable importance on driving policy initiatives for financial inclusion however financial exclusion in urban areas especially of the lower strata of the society has not received the attention it deserves from researchers and policymakers even though urban poverty and deprivations are of considerable importance in the present indian context the challenges of financial inclusion and accessibility in the urban areas differ substantially from those found in the rural regions given the fact that the possibility of physical access to financial services is much higher in urban areas in order to provide a macro perspective the book begins with an analysis of the unit record data on nature and extent of financial inclusion and access to credit in urban india based on debt and investment survey data 59th and 70th rounds provided by the national sample survey office nssso in subsequent steps the book discusses findings from a primary survey carried out in the state of karnataka of self employed persons engaged in informal services sector this exercise has helped to comprehend the ways in which they currently meet their financial needs for different income generating purposes the terms and conditions under which they do so and the challenges that remained for possible interventions experiences of other developing nations in their attempts to ensure financial inclusion and the lesson learnt thereby are the other highlights of the book the sixty years between 1773 and 1833 determined british paramountcy in india those years were formative too for british eurasians by the 1820s eurasians were an identifiable and vocal community of significant numbers particularly in the main presidency towns they were valuable to the administration of government although barred in the main from higher office the ambition of their educated elite was to be accepted as british subjects not to be treated as native indians an ambition which was finally rejected in the 1830s

Poor Relations 2013-12-16

increasing concern has been expressed by third world leaders and international organizations alike over the growing gap between rich and poor nations between 1950 and 1980 alone the per capita income gap between low income and industrialized countries grew from 3 677 to 9 648 in addition within the developing nations themselves an ever widening gap separates the rich from the poor other evidence suggests that middle income countries may be gaining on the rich countries some research shows that the gap in education and health is narrowing rather rapidly and studies of domestic inequality have revealed that growth with equity has occurred in a number of developing nations that have committed themselves to such a policy this volume presents the evidence for both sides of the debate it begins by stating the conventional wisdom that international and internal gaps are widening and goes on to examine the major explanations offered which focus on culture urban bias dependency and world system analysis the book then presents empirical studies on the existence and causes of the gap as well as key case studies that challenge the conventional wisdom unique in its objectivity this text does not seek to serve either side of the debate but instead draws upon the best research in the field to highlight major issues and to present studies that have subjected the differing perspectives to rigorous empirical analysis it will prove especially useful in courses on third world development political economy comparative politics development economics the sociology of development and related topics
