everything happening around us every action and reaction follows up with feelings just as happiness held is a seed happiness shared we are in a sea of feelings floating in the emotions each poem can be relatable to anyone who has ever been through it happy reading broad in scope generous in spirit and wittily accompanied by risbridger s commentary sarah perry author of the essex serpent set me on fire is an anthology for a new moment in poetry a collection of fresh vibrant voices from poets all over the globe both living and dead with an intuitive accessible feelings first format these are poems for the moments when you really need to know that someone else has been there too these are poems about eating and kissing and having too many feelings about being outside and inside and loving someone so much you think you might die they are about break ups and getting back together and oh god it s complicated don t ask me moments they are about wanting and waiting and having about grieving and life after death and the end of the world they are in other words about being alive this my first book of verse was published in 1987 i have revised it added an introduction to each poem and brought the writing up to current standards it contains 44 rhymed poems 8 of which are sonnets love and longing are the main themes that permeate this youthful work if ren descartes had been a poet he might have said i feel therefore i am if life is not felt then for the poet it does not exist feelings are our windows to the world through them we love hate desire fight flee find happiness joy romance satisfaction sadness and most importantly develop impressions beauty is felt not seen we see many things all the time but one has to feel things to perceive them as beautiful moreover all artistic creations are but renditions of our feelings and perceptions the satisfaction we derive from any art form is through the feelings it evokes in us art emanates from feelings and evokes feelings poetry is one art form where feelings can be accurately recorded and in turn reciprocally evoked when you appreciate a poem you really appreciate the feelings it evokes in you it may make you feel love sadness nostalgia pity anger beauty or it may remind you of past feelings experiences impressions and states the poet does not always feel more deeply than others the poet has the gift to record feelings in such a way that whoever reads or hears these recordings has similar feelings evoked feelings are emotions and emotions are the basis for all human values if something is important to us we really are saying that we feel that it is valuable and significant without feelings we cannot evaluate judge react experience life have faith in god or believe in anyone or anything feelings fuel life they provide us with zest zeal energy enthusiasm and color honor shame pride fear patriotism character honesty right wrong and all the spectra of human laws histories wars cults religions and civilizations are based on feelings feelings are not only important they also are very personal emotions i cannot understand a poem without some insight into the time place and circumstances under which it was written in order to be able to identify with his or her feelings and appreciate their depth and beauty i also need to know something about the life and personality of the poet therefore i have provided for every poem an appropriate introduction to elucidate the emotional setting and the metaphorical meaning moreover i have arranged the poems chronologically to allow the reader to see the inevitable growth and change that occur with time finally my poetry has rhyme and rhythm if it is read correctly there is a lot of music in it that adds to its beauty and makes it easier to remember these poems are feelings put to music via words they are condensed concentrated intense and provocative to be appreciated they should be recited and heard reading them quietly or alone tempers their impact like all forms of art poetry thrives only when there is a good audience i wish i could read them to all of you the poem once upon a smile was his first to write something he wanted to put on paper or record it s a poem about a smile it describes the person who wears it a smile that s innocent humble meek shy and a submitting look well the smile did it it ended up being desires and pleasant moments rumor has it is a romantic fantasy hoping it would really come to be true sail into the sunset is then again a romantic fantasy believing to sail into the sunset to your dreams with a smile still waters on my shore are feelings about one s love that s lost and one s anguish and sadness that s suffocating to live but surviving to live that hopeless hope that of his human values if something is important to us we really are saying that we feel that it is valuable and significant without feelings we cannot evaluate judge react experience life have faith in god or believe in anyone or anything feelings fuel life they provide us with zest zeal energy enthusiasm and color honor shame pride fear patriotism character honesty right wrong and all the spectra of human laws histories wars cults religions and civilizations are based on feelings feelings are not only important they also are very personal emotions i cannot understand a poem without some insight into the time place and circumstances under which it was written in order to be able to identify with his or her feelings and appreciate their depth and beauty i also need to know something about the life and personality of the poet therefore i have provided for every poem an appropriate introduction to elucidate the emotional setting and the metaphorical meaning moreover i have arranged the poems chronologically to allow the reader to see the inevitable growth and change that occur with time finally my poetry has rhyme and rhythm if it is read correctly there is a lot of music in it that adds to its beauty and makes it easier to remember these poems are feelings put to music via words they are condensed concentrated intense and provocative to be appreciated they should be recited and heard reading them quietly or alone tempers their impact like all forms of art poetry thrives only when there is a good audience i wish i could read them to all of you
