a boundary layer is a thin layer of viscous fluid close to the solid surface of a wall in contact with a moving stream in which within its thickness  $\delta$  the flow velocity varies from zero at the wall where the flow sticks to the wall because of its viscosity up to  $u_e$  at the boundary which approximately within 1 error corresponds to the solution to boundary layer on a free surface pdf this section provides readings class notes videos seen during class and problems with solutions for two lectures on boundary layers separation and drag
