insightful interview with naylor and focusing on her first four novels the book situates various acts of insurgency throughout her work within a larger framework of african american opposition to hegemonic authority but what truly distinguishes this volume is its engagement with african american vernacular forms and twentieth century political movements in her provocative analysis maxine lavon montgomery argues that naylor constantly attempts to reconfigure the home and homespace to be more conducive to black self actualization thus providing a stark contrast to a dominant white patriarchy evident in a broader public sphere employing a postcolonial and feminist theoretical framework to analyze naylor s evolving body of work montgomery pays particular attention to black slave historiography tales of conjure trickster lore and oral devices involving masking word play and code switching the vernacular strategies that have catapulted naylor to the vanguard of contemporary african american letters montgomery argues for the existence of home as a place that is not exclusively architectural or geographic in nature she posits that in naylor s writings home exists as an intermediate space embedded in cultural memory and encoded in the vernacular home closely resembles a highly symbolic signifying system bound with vexed issues of racial sovereignty as well as literary authority through a reinscription of the subversive frequently clandestine acts of resistance on the part of the border subject those outside the dominant culture naylor recasts space in such a way as to undermine reader expectation and destabilize established models of dominance influence and control thoroughly researched and sophisticated in its approach the fiction of gloria naylor will be essential reading for scholars and students of african american american and africana literary and cultural studies twentieth century america has witnessed the most widespread and sustained movement of african americans from the south to urban centers in the north who set you flowin examines the impact of this dislocation and urbanization identifying the resulting migration narratives as a major genre in african american cultural production griffin takes an interdisciplinary approach with readings of several literary texts migrant correspondence painting photography rap music blues and rhythm and blues from these various sources griffin isolates the tropes of ancestor stranger and safe space which though common to all migration narratives vary in their portrayal she argues that the emergence of a dominant portrayal of these tropes is the product of the historical and political moment often challenged by alternative portrayals in other texts or artistic forms as well as intra textually richard wright s bleak yet cosmopolitan portraits were countered by dorothy west s longing for black southern communities ralph ellison while continuing wright s vision reexamined the significance of black southern culture griffin concludes with toni morrison embracing the south as a site of african american history and culture a place to be redeemed donald j greiner s provocative new study evaluates the fiction of ten contemporary female novelists to ask questions about gender relations in american fiction looking closely at the reaction of female writers to what greiner describes as a central paradigm of american literature men bonding in the wilderness in an attempt to escape women and the social restrictions they represent greiner contends that female novelists have not only adopted the venerable model but also adapted it so that women venture into the wilderness while excluding men from the quest greiner first shows how such contemporary white male novelists as frederick busch john irving and larry woiwode modify the literary model established by cooper melville and twain to include women in the bonding process he then argues that recent female novelists are not so eager to allow males into the wilderness or to bond with them rather than facilitate a closing of the gender gap many contemporary female writers insist on separating the sexes greiner frames his analysis with discussions of prominent feminist literary theorists and feminist psychologists including carolyn heilbrun rachel brownstein nancy chodorow janice raymond and judith kegan gardiner from close readings of recent novels by gloria naylor marianne wiggins joan didion diane johnson marilynne robinson mona simpson hilma wolitzer meg wolitzer joan chase and lisa alther greiner finds three significant differences in the way contemporary female novelists employ the quest plot the patriarchal text is not repudiated but revised to accommodate female characters who readily accept the traditional masculine call to the quest once outside the bounds of society female bonds do not always hold males are excluded from the bonding process to contrast the gender exclusivity favored by contemporary female writers greiner ends his study with a discussion of bonding as portrayed by contemporary male novelist douglas ungar

the collection s concluding essay in which she provides a series of reflections on literary and cultural representations of community on generic categorizations of community and on regionalism and narrative of community as she returns to theoretical ground she first broke almost twenty years ago overall these essays bring their contributors and readers into a community engaged with a narrative genre that inspires and affords a rich and growing tradition of scholarship with narratives of community editor roxanne harde offers a wealth of critical essays on a wide variety of women s linked series of short stories essays that can be seen overall to explore the genre as a kind of meeting house of fictional form and meaning for an inclusive sororal community the book itself joins a growing critical community of monographs and essay collections that have been critically documenting the rise of the modern genre of the story cycle to a place second only to the novel but more than simply joining this critical venture narratives of community makes a major contribution to studies in the short story feminist theory women s studies and genre theory its introduction and essays should prove of enduring interest to scholars and critics in these fields as well as continue highly useful in the undergraduate and graduate classrooms gerald lynch professor of english university of ottawa the introduction by prof harde and the 20 essays in the book dialogue with sandra zagarell s proposed paradigm narratives of community which other scholars have called short story cycles or story sequences zagarell s proposal organically blends a generic model with a thematic concern to explain how women writing community often turn to a particular narrative style that itself supports the literary creation of that community harde and the volume contributors appropriate this brilliant and engaging proposal in the context of other crucial discussions of the genre notably forest ingram s germinal study j gerald kennedy s work and those by robert luscher maggie dunn and anne morris james nagel gerald lynch and i m honored to note my own study on asian american short story cycles to expand the range of the critical discussion on the form the quality and diversity of the essays remind us that there is still much work that can be done in the area of genre studies the volume emphasizes an important caveat to one vital misconception that although writers like james joyce or sherwood anderson are thought to be the precursors or even inventors of the form women s sequences by sara orne jewett and elizabeth gaskell among others actually predate the work of the male writers this fact suggests that the development of the form as a genre that attends to specific perspectives or creative formulations of and by women needs to be considered in depth the temporal scope of the volume is therefore a vital contribution to scholarship on the form as is the diversity of the writers analyzed indeed the examination of narratives by writers from different countries and that focus on characters from different time periods racial religious or ethnic communities and social class impels a multilayered reading of the texts that inevitably promotes a nuanced understanding of the project of each of the writers a project that connects issues of individuality and community in varied and often surprising ways the essays thus critically explore the notion of community in its myriad associations with the individual and as a crucial site not only for women s action upon the world but also for her creative endeavors the essays in the volume revisit familiar texts naylor s the women of brewster place cisneros s the house on mango street kingston s the woman warrior welty s the golden apples munro s the lives of girls and women among others but offer new perspectives on the way form interacts with issues of women s communities and women creating community in these works significantly it also offers readings on texts that have not been analyzed in detail from this perspective gaskell s cranford or woolf s a haunted house for example thus contributing to a continuing conversation about the ways women write the juxtaposition of the familiar and the new expand the paradigms of current criticism not only on the story cycle but also on women s writing in general rocio davis professor of literature university of navarre roxanne harde s forthcoming volume narratives of community women s short story sequences provides an abundant collection of varied responses to sandra zagarell s longstanding call for further in depth exploration of the genre that zagarell christened the narrative of community in her 1988 essay linking non novelistic narrative form with representations of female experience as Harde observes such narratives of community overlap significantly with the growing canon of unified but discontinuous collections of autonomous stories that critics have variously labeled as the short story cycle sequence composite the essays in her collection examine a rich variety of such works by women extending the scholarship in this area Harde's ample collection of essays presents a concerted and diverse exploration of the implications of the short story sequence form as a representation of women's lives as part of and in conflict with membership in a community overall Harde's volume is a welcome addition to current scholarship on the short story sequence bringing in a variety of new voices and perspectives to the community of scholars who have engaged in the exploration of this paradoxical evolving and increasingly popular genre Dr Luscher how do different ethnic groups approach the short story form do different groups develop culture related themes do oral traditions within a particular culture shape the way in which written stories are told why does the community loom so large in ethnic stories how do such traditional forms as African American slave narratives or the Chinese talk story shape the modern short story which writers of color should be added to the canon why have some minority writers been ignored for such a long time how does a person of color write for white publishers editors and readers each essay in this collection of original studies addresses these questions and other related concerns it is common knowledge that most scholarly work on the short story has been on white writers this collection is the first work to specifically focus on short story practice by ethnic minorities in America ranging from african americans to native americans chinese americans to hispanic americans the number of women writers discussed will be of particular interest to women studies and genre studies researchers and the collections will be of vital interest to scholars working in american literature narrative theory and multicultural studies
