throughout his career friedrich wilhelm nietzsche explored the concept of the will to power interpreting it variously as a psychological biological and metaphysical principle this posthumously produced volume drawn from his unpublished notebooks collects the nineteenth century philosopher s thoughts on the force that drives humans toward achievement dominance and creative activity misunderstandings of nietzsche s previous works compelled the author to attempt to express his doctrines in a more unequivocal form these writings elucidate the principle that he held to be the essential factor of all existence the drive and energy to develop independently according to one s nature rather than being dominated by outside forces a work that both illuminates and extends our understanding of nietzsche s earlier books this volume offers reflections on art morality christianity nihilism and other topics that provide absorbing glimpses into the mind of one of philosophy s great thinkers over the last few decades most societies have become more repressive their laws more relentless their magistrates more inflexible independently of the evolution of crime in the will to punish using an approach both genealogical and ethnographic distinguished anthropologist didier fassin addresses the major issues raised by this punitive moment through an inquiry into the very foundations of punishment what is punishment why punish who is punished through these three questions he initiates a critical dialogue with moral philosophy and legal theory on the definition the justification and the distribution of punishment discussing various historical and national contexts mobilizing a ten year research program on police justice and prison and taking up the legacy of friedrich nietzsche and michel foucault he shows that the link between crime and punishment is an historical artifact that the response to crime has not always been the infliction of pain that punishment does not only proceed from rational logics used to legitimize it that more severity in sentencing often means increasing social inequality before the law and that the question what should be punished always comes down to the questions whom do we deem punishable and whom do we want to be spared going against a triumphant penal populism this investigation proposes a salutary revision of the presuppositions that nourish the passion for punishing and invites to rethink the place of punishment in the contemporary world the theses developed in the volume are discussed by criminologist david garland historian rebecca mclennan and sociologist bruce western to whom didier fassin responds in a short essay let us give the name of hypothesis to anything that may be proposed to our belief and just as the electricians speak of live and dead wires let us speak of any hypothesis as either live or dead a live hypothesis is one which appeals as a real possibility to him to whom it is proposed if i ask you to believe in the mahdi the notion makes no electric connection with your nature it refuses to scintillate with any credibility at all as an hypothesis it is completely dead to an arab however even if he be not one of the mahdi s followers the hypothesis is among the mind s possibilities it is alive this shows that deadness and liveness in an hypothesis are not intrinsic properties but relations to the individual thinker they are measured by his willingness to act the maximum of liveness in an hypothesis means willingness to act irrevocably practically that means belief but there is some believing tendency wherever there is willingness to act at all
