this is the second and slightly revised edition of this book a few errors have been fixed and some references to related work have been added i thank the readers for their comments on the first edition we analyze the search efficiency of a number of common refutational theorem proving strategies on propositional and near propositional problems search efficiency is concerned with the total number of proofs and partial proofs generated rather than with the sizes of the proofs we show that most common strategies produce search spaces of exponential size even on simple sets of clauses or else are not sensitive to the goal however clause linking which uses a reduction to propositional calculus has behavior that is more favorable in some respects a property that it shares with methods that cache subgoals a strategy which is of interest for term rewriting based theorem proving is the ordering strategy and we discuss it in some detail we show some advantages of a ordering over other strategies which may help to explain its efficiency in practice we also point out some of its combinatorial inefficiencies especially in relation to goal sensitivity and irrelevant clauses in addition sld resolution which is of importance for prolog implementation has combinatorial inefficiencies this may suggest basing prolog implementations on a different theorem proving strategy we also develop techniques for studying the asymptotic complexity of first order theorem provers this permits an analytic comparison of the worst case performances of various theorem proving methods
