Estimation of an Origin-destination Trip Table Based on Observed Link Volumes and Turning Movments. Volume 2: User's Manual. Final Report 1980

the past 30 years have seen the emergence of a growing desire worldwide that positive actions be taken to restore and protect the environment from the degrading effects of all forms of pollution air water soil and noise since pollution is a direct or indirect consequence of waste production the seemingly idealistic demand for zero discharge can be construed as an unrealistic demand for zero waste however as long as waste continues to exist we can only attempt to abate the subsequent pollution by converting it to a less noxious form three major questions usually arise when a particular type of pollution has been identi ed 1 how serious is the pollution 2 is the technology to abate it available and 3 do the costs of abatement justify the degree of abatement achieved this book is one of the volumes of the handbook of environmental engineering series the principal intention of this series is to help readers formulate answers to the last two questions above the traditional approach of applying tried and true solutions to speci c pollution problems has been a major contributing factor to the success of environmental engineering and has accounted in large measure for the establishment of a methodology of pollution control however the realization of the ever increasing complexity and interrelated nature of current environmental problems renders it imperative that intelligent planning of pollution abatement systems be undertaken multimedia data comprising of images audio and video is becoming increasingly common the decreasing costs of consumer electronic devices such as digital cameras and digital camcorders along with the ease of transportation facilitated by the internet has lead to a phenomenal rise in the amount of multimedia data generated and distributed given that this trend of increased use of multimedia data is likely to accelerate there is an urgent need for providing a clear means of capturing storing indexing retrieving analyzing and summarizing such data content based access to multimedia data is of primary importance since it is the natural way by which human beings interact with such information to facilitate the content based access of multimedia information the first step is to derive feature measures from these data so that a feature space representation of the data content can be formed this can subsequently allow for mapping the feature space to the symbol space semantics either automatically or through human intervention thus signal to symbol mapping useful for any practical system can be successfully achieved perspectives on content based multimedia systems provides a comprehensive set of techniques to tackle these important issues this book offers detailed solutions to a wide range of practical problems in building real systems by providing specifics of three systems built by the authors while providing a systems focus it also equips the reader with a keen understanding of the fundamental issues including a formalism for content based multimedia database systems multimedia feature extraction object based techniques signature based techniques and fuzzy retrieval techniques the performance evaluation issues
