Language in the Modern World 1964 seminar paper from the year 2010 in the subject english language and literature studies linguistics grade 1 0 ernst moritz arndt university of greifswald language english abstract for me learning english has always been quite easy though i grew up as a monolingual person and my first contact with english was not until the fifth grade i have been surrounded by this language constantly when i first started to translate my favorite pop songs into german i became more and more familiar with english as the following paragraphs show this is exactly one of the reasons that people are so familiar with it nowadays and that made me think about this language a little bit more intensive english is everywhere even in an official monolingual country like germany though it helps us to get a better understanding for many terms in the world there is also a negative side i think that a conversation held in german should not contain more english words than necessary or even poison it though the influence of the english language on german is undeniable it should never dominate the other language this term paper deals with the status of english as a global language it shows how far english is spread nowadays and also tries to find answers to the question why english of all the many languages in the world is so influential therefore historical grammatical and other reasons are investigated afterwards the paper presents the two sides of the english status namely advantages that come with it but also the negative effects that occur finally there is a look at the future of the english language in order to find out if the influence will increase even more or be replaced by a different language many linguists have studied this field and see english especially in relation to language death this paper shows that the topic is very complex and that it cannot be committed to either positive or negative

Language in Cape Town's District Six 2002 essay from the year 2003 in the subject english language and literature studies culture and applied geography grade b language english abstract according to structuralist and post structuralist theories identities are relational and as such they are formed and shaped through communicative processes in order to communicate we need a common system of signs that can be understood by every member of the group in everyday speech referred to as language although it is certainly true to say that language forms reproduces and promotes identity it must not be forgotten that identities are plural intersect interact and enter into conflict with each other and language identity is no exception to this consequently the relationship between language and identity when taking a closer look at it involves many different considerations and is not as clear cut as one might anticipate

Born to Parse 2020-08-25 american sign language american sign language asl is the visual gestural language used by most of the deaf community in the united states and parts of canada on the surface this language as all signed languages seems radically different from the spoken languages which have been used to formulate theories of linguistic principles and parameters however the position taken in this book is that when the surface effects of modality are stripped away asl will be seen to follow many of the patterns proposed as universals for human language if these theoretical constructs are meant to hold for language in general then they should hold for natural human language in any modality and if asl is such a natural human language then it too must be accounted for by any adequate theory of universal grammar for this reason the study of asl can be vital for proposed theories of universal grammar recent work in several theoretical frameworks of syntax as well as phonology have argued that indeed asl is such a language i will assume then that principles of universal grammar and principles that derive from it are applicable to asl and in fact that asl can serve as one of the languages which test universal grammar there is an important distinction to be drawn however between what is called here american sign language and other forms of manual communication

The Multilingual Apple 1997 humans are dependent on language and communication to survive in fact they are the only species who use language with other members in order to communicate needs and wants language is a very interesting piece of life largely because it is needed for survival but it is not easily understood due to its complexity it is believed that no one remembers the first language that people have learned but according to experts it actually begins at birth remembering how a person acquired a language is merely impossible because it was learned at a tender age through interactions with the immediate environment these are usually the parents siblings and other adults in the early years of life of a person from birth babies begin to learn about communication from the environment and surroundings they are also rewarded for communicating their needs this can be seen when babies communicate by showing an emotional response such as crying in order to get the attention of its mother or father hence communication creates a two way relationship between the baby and its parents however humans are not born to speak words and sentences in order to seek for their wants it is acquired over time throughout the first few years of their life this shows that language is a skill that is learned earlier on in life and manifests during the different stages of development of a person there are other ways of communication also considered as verbal communication this can be through body language sign language and showing of emotions usually referred to as non verbal communication for instance when babies are born they spend a lot of time crying in order to communicate their needs to their parents this is because they don't know how to express their needs through speech despite that they know how to get what they want before they could speak hence language has different aspects which shows its complexity these include receptive and expressive languages which will later be discussed in an attempt to understand language learning and the stages in which it is acquired language is present in the daily lives of humans all over the world no matter the country a person is born and raised in there are languages that help different cultures to communicate their wants and needs to people within the same culture while there can be communication between cultures success is attained when people from a culture learn a second or third language so as to enhance communication the most fascinating thing about language is that despite its varying dialects it can be acquired in similar ways across the world since it has been around for a very long time it is usually an interesting topic for experts and researchers over time it has also become a subject that has been studied by many scientists psycholinguists and researchers all around the world although there are thousands of different languages worldwide the main purpose of language is common and simple humans need it to meet their basic needs of survival this is done by communicating their wants which eventually leads to a happy and successful life in the world today there are so many languages and dialects which is well above 7 000 and it helps humans to have proper communication babies enter the world knowing only how to communicate through noises such as crying and cooing in order to show their mood the first noise that a mother hears is crying and this is how a baby seeks for comfort from their care takers whether they are hungry wants to be cuddled or are unhappy with the temperature light or noise level within their current surrounding likewise they show when they are hungry and dissatisfied or happy and content this causes the caretaker to take action and attempt to soothe the crying baby or reward the happy infant with smiles and cooing through this the baby knows what to do whenever it feels that way as infants continue to grow they learn other ways to communicate through sounds and motions which eventually turns into words and sentences in whatever language they have learned from those around them there are many stages young children go through when learning a language we often hear children mimicking the words and phrases of those around them even when we think that they are not listening or don't understand although humans don't realize it language is used every day throughout our lives and it is a very powerful tool we are so accustomed to language that we do not even understand that it plays an integral role in our lives no matter the language a person speaks humans acquire communication skills by watching the behavior of others whom they trust and are together with this is evident in the fact that there are many dialects spoken throughout our world children learn those dialects from listening to people around them another important aspect that affects the people which are present in a person's life in communicating is the accent children pick up accents from different regions of the world through their parents and adults that are near them when they start learning how to speak there are many common accents that come from different regions of the world taking english language as an example a person from england has a specific way of speaking this may be different from someone who lives in the east coast in the united states these differences in accents show a listener where they are from someone who lives in or near boston massachusetts has a different accent compared to someone who lives in new york city in new york there is some kind of indication that dialects and accents are learned from those people who are around the environment and speak to a person which becomes his learning language it is a common behavior for a toddler to copy the behavior or words and phrases uttered by their parents or siblings they may also pick up ways in which those languages sound and use them in their own speech when that occurs when mimicking children are using language in an expressive way and attempting to discover what happens when they speak if they are rewarded for speaking they will continue to do so children who are negatively reinforced for speaking may become non verbal this shows that it is very important to treat children especially as they are learning to speak in order to encourage them to express themselves better in this book language will be discussed in order to pay a close attention to these popular theories and the different ways it is acquired through observation and behavior the way language acquisition differs from various countries around the world will also be explored in order to understand how it differs throughout regions of various countries different stages of language acquisition for both first languages and second languages will also be explored in order to aid the understanding of language learning topics such as first and second language acquisition stages strategies and differences will be discussed likewise the reason behind the difference of languages spoken across the globe and throughout different cultures and how to attain these similar communication skills will also be discussed young children from all over the world learn languages by being immersed and surrounded by it while this is the most easily understood theory other theories will be explored although humans also communicate in many different ways there are language and speech disorders that may delay or alter ways in which some humans interconnect these disorders and different ways of communication will also be discussed to show how those with language difficulties are able to survive since communication is an important aspect of survival likewise the ways in which children learn to communicate through the latter years will be mentioned language is imperative to gaining knowledge learning to read and write and to be successful in life research also shows that there may be a correlation between language acquisition and intelligence another important point to discuss will be language acquisition in early childhood education and throughout the educational career teachers are often responsible for teaching parts of language so that students can be successful in the academic world and beyond in school children learn about grammar vocabulary and written communication including handwriting gathering and organizing ideas and expressing ideas and opinions through their writing strategies to properly and effectively gain communication skills within school will be discussed there are many research based approaches that are known to be efficient in helping children develop and be successful in language skills summarily language is an imperative and integral part of life all over the world as humans we need it to survive and to communicate our daily needs and wants understanding how important communication is to a person's life aids our comprehension of language the rest of it such as its history and how it is acquired is not so simple

Spoken Cree, Level II 2004-04-29 an insightful accessible examination of the way in which day to day speech is tangled in a complicated web of history politics race economics and power kirkus what is it about other people s language that moves some of us to anxiety or even rage for centuries sticklers the world over have donned the cloak of authority to control the way people use words now this sensational new book strikes back to defend the fascinating real life diversity of this most basic human faculty with the erudite yet accessible style that marks his work as a journalist robert lane greene takes readers on a rollicking tour around the world illustrating with vivid anecdotes the role language beliefs play in shaping our identities for good and ill beginning with literal myths from the tower of babel to the bloody origins of the word shibboleth greene shows how language experts went from myth making to rule making and from building cohesive communities to building modern nations from the notion of one language s superiority to the common perception that phrases like it s me are bad english linguistic beliefs too often define us and distance them supporting class ethnic or national prejudices in short what we hear about language is often really about the politics of identity governments foolishly try to police language development the french academy nationalism leads to the violent suppression of minority languages kurdish and basque and even americans fear that the most successful language in world history english may be threatened by increased immigration these false language beliefs are often tied to harmful political ends and can lead to the violation of basic human rights conversely political involvement in language can sometimes prove beneficial as with the zionist revival of hebrew or our present day efforts to provide education in foreign languages essential to business diplomacy and intelligence and yes standardized languages play a crucial role in uniting modern societies as this fascinating book shows everything we ve been taught to think about language may not be wrong but it is often about something more than language alone you are what you speak will certainly get people talking

You Are What You Speak 2011-03-08 the book is intended for non specialists an upbeat introduction to language and linguistics for general readers the chapters are short three to five pages suitable for browsing or reading on the move and its style is intentionally light more like what used to be called fireside chats or somewhat more currently speed dating events in fact it was born as a series of radio chats called talkin about talk which in 2005 was part of a celebration of the year of languages in the united states the essays have an informal tone because of the on air persona of the narrator a knowledgeable and amiable guide whose task it was to de mystify the sometimes complex subject of language for a wide range of listeners each week the narrator talked about a language related topic in a relaxed conversational style for exactly five minutes thus the title of the book the third edition of this has been expanded by 14 new chapters covering contemporary topics of interest or subjects overlooked in the earlier editions 2006 2011 furthermore chapters from previous editions were updated we hope that this expansion has made the collection more comprehensive and current while remaining faithful to its guiding principles what do people who are not in the language field want to know about language what are some of their major misconceptions what do our readers want to know about learning or using languages the resulting essays each with a question as its title are what we like to think of as a savory platter of linguistic hors d oeuvres something to whet your appetite and invite you to proceed to a more substantial dish of linguistics

The Five-minute Linguist 2019 fills a gap in cross linguistic research by being the first systematic survey of the word formation of the world's languages data from fifty five world languages reveals associations between word formation processes in genetically and geographically distinct languages
