past exploration in low and moderate temperature systems of the great basin shows that the relatively small area associated with fluid upflow and elevated temperatures is often difficult to detect by drilling widely spaced temperature gradient holes or by other methods by studying the newcastle geothermal system we hoped to develop a basic understanding of the concealed hydrothermal system as a tool for assessing other geothermal areas of the great basin the emphasis of our work centered on determining 1 the distribution of subsurface heat and the movement of thermal fluid 2 the location and geometry of bedrock structures that might control fluid movements 3 the chemical character of the geothermal water and 4 the geometry of the bedrock beneath the escalante desert field studies included 1 drilling and monitoring temperatures in shallow thermal gradient boreholes 2 mapping geologic units and performing structural studies in the adjacent mountains 3 conducting detailed gravity surveys 4 conducting electrical resistivity and self potential sp surveys 5 collecting water samples for determining major ions and light stable isotope analyses and 6 mapping quaternary units
