The Arabic Language 1968

the arabic language was first published in 1969 minnesota archive editions uses digital technology to make long unavailable books once again accessible and are published unaltered from the original university of minnesota press editions arabic with its rich literary heritage is one of the major languages of the world it is spoken by about one hundred million people inhabiting a wide and important area of the middle east yet the language and its significant role in history are little known in the english speaking countries except among specialists this book will it is hoped help to introduce the language and demonstrate its importance to a wider audience professor philip k hitti of princeton university writes in the foreword until recently arabic studies in this country had been limited to the graduate level and confined to a few universities since world war ii they have inched their way to the undergraduate curriculum of a small number of universities but they are still top heavy and anemic they will so remain unless they send their roots deeper down into high schools and enlist the interest of a widening circle of nonspecialists hence the value of this work by professor chejne it is a commendable attempt to introduce the arabic language with its features and problems to students and nonspecialists to tell the story of its dramatic evolution from a tribal dialect to one of the few carriers of world culture to indicate its unique relation to the religion of islam and its role in the development of modern arab nationalism the book written in a language intelligible to the layman sums up what is already known and presents the contribution of the author a history of arabic astronomy is a comprehensive survey of arabic planetary theories from the eleventh century to the fifteenth century based on recent manuscript discoveries george saliba argues that the medieval period often called a period of decline in islamic intellectual history was scientifically speaking a very productive period in which astronomical theories of the highest order were produced based on the most recent manuscript discoveries this book broadly surveys developments in arabic planetary theories from the eleventh century to the fifteenth taken together the primary texts and essays assembled in this book reverse traditional beliefs about the rise and fall of arabic science demonstrating how the traditional age of decline in arabic science was indeed a golden age as far as astronomy was concerned some of the techniques and mathematical theorems developed during this period were identical to those which were employed by copernicus in developing his own non ptolemaic astronomy significantly this volume will shed much needed light on the conditions under which such theories were developed in medieval islam it clearly demonstrates the distinction that was drawn between astronomical activities and astrological ones and reveals contrary to common perceptions about medieval islam the accommodation that was obviously reached between religion and astronomy and the degree to which astronomical planetary theories were supported and at times even financed by the religious community itself this in stark contrast to the systematic attacks leveled by the same religious community against astrology to students of european intellectual history the book reveals the technical relationship between the astronomy of the arabs and that of copernicus saliba s definitive work will be of particular interest to historians of arabic science as well as to historians of medieval and renaissance european science

a riveting comprehensive history of the arab peoples and tribes that explores the role of language as a cultural touchstone this kaleidoscopic book covers almost 3 000 years of arab history and shines a light on the footloose arab peoples and tribes who conquered lands and disseminated their language and culture over vast distances tracing this process to the origins of the arabic language rather than the advent of islam tim mackintosh smith begins his narrative more than a thousand years before muhammad and focuses on how arabic both spoken and written has functioned as a vital source of shared cultural identity over the millennia mackintosh smith reveals how linguistic developments from pre islamic poetry to the growth of script muhammad s use of writing and the later problems of printing arabic have helped and hindered the progress of arab history and investigates how even in today s politically fractured post arab spring environment arabic itself is still a source of unity and disunity during the middle ages the arabs ruled the civilized world they succeeded in conquering arabia egypt iraq mesopotamia and africa parts of china spain sicily portugal turkey persia syria jordan and lebanon had they not been stopped by charles martel at the famous and decisive battle of tours poitiers in 732 a d the arab conquest of the west would have spread into france and beyond and consequently would have changed the face of europe and perhaps even shaped the modern world altogether this book in two carefully selected volumes is intended to be a short history of arabic literature it provides the teacher with a quick summary and gives the beginning student a broad overview in chronological sequence of the historical and literary accomplishments of the arab people from pre islamic times up to the modern era volume one covers the period from pre islamic arabia to the end of the abbaasid era volume two covers the period from the arabs occupation of spain to the modern era of course there already exist many excellent books that deal with this subject matter however the uniqueness and usefulness of this book which is also presented to the curious and casual reader of middle eastern literature especially if he is able to also read arabic lies in the fact that it not only provides interesting and didactic reading material but it also has the following features that other similar books do not have 1 the scope and timeline are so broad and comprehensive and spans the period from 500 a d 1984 a d all between the covers of one book in two volumes 2 the generous number of samples of poetry and prose selections from every poet or author mentioned in this book is included here in these two volumes in the original arabic to illustrate the text and support the discussion on every poet and writer hence the student of arabic does not have to go searching for poetry or prose examples in order to understand or support an argument in this way he can immediately learn to appreciate a particular poet s poetry or writing arabic is the only living language to have been taught in dutch higher education for more than four centuries practical usefulness however has been a prerequisite from the start knowledge of arabic was to promote dutch interests in the muslim world or to help refute islam as a cognate of classical hebrew the study of arabic served as an ancillary science to biblical studies nevertheless many arabists such as thomas erpenius and jacobus golius rose to international distinction with more than 110 colour illustrations from the Leiden Oriental Collections Arabic Studies in the Netherlands a short history in portraits 1580-1950 by Arnoud Vrolijk and Richard van Leeuwen will help the reader to gain insight into a fascinating aspect of Dutch intellectual history

History of the Arabs 1970

This is the first translation of a classic work Baḥṭh fī nash'at ilm al ta'rikh inda l-'Arab by the eminent Arab historian al-Aḍurī published in Beirut in 1960. Aḍurī's book was the first comprehensive effort to trace the origins and early development of Arab historical writing and to resolve some extremely complex and still debated questions about the reliability of the Arabic historical sources. Originally published in 1984, the Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print-on-demand technology to again make available previously out-of-print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press. These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions. The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905.

essay from the year 2010 in the subject Orientalism Sinology Arabistic grade 10 course historia y cultura Árabo islámica language English abstract in this essay I will give a general overview of the development of Arabic calligraphy from its beginning till today. The reader will soon learn that the evolution of this elaborate and complex art was always closely linked to great personalities artists that in its early times formed and systematized this art later brought it to its peaks and in the last centuries revised and modernized it writing about the history of calligraphy will therefore be writing about a line of persons that step by step on succeeded by another defined arabic calligraphy in their time and in its whole brought it to where it is today as calligraphy is the art of elaborated writing it is of course closely linked to script and language the arabic language developed already before the coming of islam¹ but arabic calligraphy as an art with different styles uses and a certain place in society was a phenomena that appeared in the time of the first great empires that is why i will focus on the development in and after this times that means i m not gonna investigate preislamic arabic calligraphy or look at the development of the arabic language and its aesthetic aspects fields that would provide enough material for interesting researches for its own as the art i will write about has been performed for many centuries and in a great extend there are many old and new works in display around the work in the appendix some of them will be shown to give examples and make this essay a little more than just a historical investigation

On the History of Grammar Among the Arabs 1994-01-01

this history of the countries where arabic is the main language of speech and culture stretching from morocco to iraq covers the period from the 7th to the 10th century when the new religion of islam carried the arabic language with it and created an arabic muslim world the story is carried up to the 1980s and the author shows how arab history is intertwined with some of the great processes of world history

Arabic Thought and Its Place in History 1939-01-01

the wonder of the unique arabic numerals is so blunted by common use we forget sometimes that their sudden disappearance might cause our civilisation to grind to a halt with catastrophic consequences the invention of the system was as a great a revolution as the invention of writing and to both the transition from barbarism to civilisation is attributed indeed both may have a single source created in a time beyond the horizon of our remotest past contrary to what is generally believed there lies the origin of the arabic numerals beyond the horizon of our remotest past the history of our ancient numerals has been an intriguing mystery for over two centuries historians of numbers have tried to trace the roots of the system hundreds of manuscripts have been analysed and then reanalysed historical accounts studied and book after book churned out but remarkably solid leads to the origin of the numerals remained cold almost despairingly karl menninger confessed that the desire to hold in one s hand the key to a mystery which experts have sought for in vain remains alive in all periods of history in this thoroughly researched book historian adel s bishtawi believes the mystery has been unlocked and in the process much more was found than expected if his conclusions are correct our numerals which are miniature drawings of the hand and fingers may be 5000 7000 years old moreover it is known that numerals were invented before the letters of alphabets it is probable that some of these numerals were employed as letters in the universal alphabet used by most nations excerpt from a literary history of the arabs the term literary history may be interpreted in such different ways that an author who uses it is bound to explain at the outset what particular sense he has attached to it when mr fisher unwinn asked me to contribute a volume on the arabs to this series i accepted his proposal with alacrity not only because i welcomed the opportunity of making myself better acquainted with arabic history and literature but also and more especially in the hope that i might be able to compile a work which should serve as a general introduction to the subject and which should neither be too popular for students nor too scientific for ordinary readers its precise character was determined partly by my own predilections and partly by the conditions of time and space under which it had to be produced to write a critical account of arabic literature was out of the question brockelmann's invaluable work which contains over a thousand closely printed pages is confined to biography and bibliography and does not deal with the historical development of ideas this however seems to me the really vital aspect of literary history it has been my chief aim to sketch in broad outlines what the arabs thought and to indicate as far as possible the influences which moulded their thought i am well aware that the picture is sadly incomplete that it is full of gaps and blanks admitting of no disguise or apology but i hope that taken as a whole it is not unlike about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
