Philosophy as a Way of Life 2014-09-05 the aorta and its branches are highly elastic tubes having a smooth glistening inner surface when the arteries are cut open they present a yellowish appearance due to the large quantity of elastic tissue contained in the walls the elasticity is practically perfect being both longitudinal and transverse the essential portion of any blood vessel is the endothelial tube composed of flat cells cemented together by intercellular substance and having no stomata between the cells this tube is reinforced in different ways by connective tissue smooth muscle fibers and fibroelastic tissue although the gradations from the larger to the smaller arteries and from these to the capillaries and veins are almost insensible yet particular arteries present structural characters sufficiently marked to admit of histological differentiation the whole vascular system including the heart has an endothelial lining which may constitute a distinct inner coat the tunica intima or may be without coverings as in the case of the capillaries the intima fig 1 consists typically of endothelium reinforced by a variable amount of fibroelastic tissue in which the elastic fibers predominate the tunica media is composed of intermingled bundles of elastic tissue smooth muscle fibers and some fibrous tissue the adventitia or outer coat is exceedingly tough it is usually thinner than the media and is composed of fibroelastic tissue this division into three coats is however somewhat arbitrary as in the larger arteries particularly it is difficult to discover any distinct separation into layers
