originally published in 1935 william archer s interest in dreams had persisted for over quarter of a century for ten years of which he kept a careful record of his own dreams these records alone form a valuable collection of material of which archer made good use in the writing of the book on dreams on which he was engaged at the time of his death large parts of these dream records are reproduced in this book he left this book partly finished partly in draft and partly in the form of notes in putting together this material the editor theodore besterman tries to carry out archer s intentions as closely as possible and believed that he represented the book as he would have wished it to appear it was unquestionably an important contribution to a difficult subject at the time the result of many years study and reflection in oblivion born only a few years before hemingway farson had a life trajectory that paralleled and intersected hemingway s in ways that compelled writers for publications as divergent as the guardian and field stream to compare them unlike hemingway however farson has been forgotten this high flying and literate biography recovers farson s life in its multifaceted details from his time as an arms dealer to czarist russia during world war i to his firsthand reporting on hitler and mussolini to his assignment in india where he broke the news of gandhi s arrest by the british to his excursion to kenya a few years before the mau mau uprising farson also found the time to publish an autobiography the way of a transgressor which made him an international publishing sensation in 1936 as well as going fishing one of the most enduring of all outdoors books f scott fitzgerald a fellow member of the lost generation whose art competed with a public image grander than reality once confessed that while he had to rely on his imagination farson could simply draw from his own event filled life almost hemingway is the definitive window on that remarkable story i had just come from mother s room early one morning and was sitting alone on the steps at the front of the building when bill drove up in his little red station wagon he approached me and knowing that any change in mother could only be for the worse simply said let s go in and see mother we remained at her bedside for ten or fifteen minutes then we went back outside and sat down together on the concrete steps it was a clear fall day and people of the community were going placidly about their affairs only mother inside on the hospital bed was motionless except for her breathing which seemed to become more labored with each passing day bill got out his pipe slowly filled the bowl with the special tobacco which was blended for him in london and fished a big kitchen match from a pocket of his ancient hunting jacket then with unlit pipe in one hand and unstruck match in the other he gazed out at the unhurried traffic and asked me what my thoughts were on the hereafter i carefully explained them as best i could and when i had finished he struck the match on the concrete and applied the swelling flame to his pipe it didn t catch very well and i remember he took the pipe from his mouth and gently tapped the bowl on the step then gazing again across the now empty street he said maybe each of us will become some sort of radio wave
