every category of human experience and in its author's desire to communicate religious truth e derek taylor suggests clarissa truly is the paradise lost of the eighteenth century arguing that clarissa's cohesiveness and intellectual rigor have suffered from the limitations of the lockean model frequently applied to the novel taylor turns to the writings of john norris a well known disciple of the theosophy of nicolas malebranche allusions to this first of locke's philosophical critics appear in each of the novel's installments and taylor persuasively documents how norris's ideas provided richardson with a usefully un-lockean rhetorical grounding for clarissa further the writings of early feminists like norris's intellectual ally mary astell who viewed her arguments on behalf of women as compatible with her conservative and deeply held religious and political views provide richardson with the combination of progressive feminism and conservative theology that animate the novel in a convincing twist taylor offers a closely argued analysis of lovelace's oft stated declaration that he will not be out norris'd or out plotted by clarissa showing how the plot of the novel and the plot of all humans exist in the context of richardson's grand theological experiment within through and by a concurrence of divine energy prentice hall literature penguin edition c 2007 components for the american experience the t t clark companion to atonement establishes a vision for the doctrine of the atonement as a unified yet extraordinarily rich event calling for the church's full appropriation most edited volumes on this doctrine focus on one aspect of the work of christ for example girard feminist thought penal substitution or divine violence the companion is unique in that every essay seeks to both appropriate and stimulate the church's understanding of the manifold nature of christ's death and resurrection the essays are divided into four main sections 1 dogmatic location 2 chapters on the old and new testaments 3 major theologians and 4 contemporary developments the first set of essays explore the inter relationship between the atonement and other christian doctrines

trinity christology and pneumatology opening up yet further avenues of inquiry essays on key theologians eschew reductionism striving to bring out the nuances and breadth of the contribution the same is true of the biblical essays the final section explores more recent developments within the doctrine for example the work of rene girard and the ongoing reflection on holy saturday the book is comprised of 18 major essays and an a-z section containing shorter dictionary length entries on a much broader range of topics the result is a combination of in depth analysis and breadth of scope making this a benchmark work for further studies in the doctrine this study examines the broad political contexts in which violence specifically domestic violence occurs the author argues that liberal and enlightenment notions of the social contract rationality and egalitarianism the ideas that constitute norms of good citizenship are inextricably linked to violence according to this dynamic targets of abuse are viewed as being irrational incapable of making good choices or negotiating with their abusers or otherwise violating norms of the social contract they are in other words second class citizens in fact as the author shows drawing from nietzsche and foucault s theories of power and arguing against much of the standard literature on domestic violence the very mechanisms that purportedly help targets of domestic abuse actually work to compound the problem by exacerbating or ignoring the power differences between the abuser and the abused the key to preventing domestic violence the author contends lies in seeing it as a political rather than a personal issue that has political consequences enlightenment ideas about intimacy that conceive of personal relationships as mutual equal and contractual must be challenged as well as policy ideas that suggest targets of abuse can simply choose to leave abusive relationships without other personal or economic consequences from publisher description in considering the ways in which current theories of language in use and communicative processes are applied to the analysis interpretation and definition the quality of life aristotle revised presents a philosophical theory about the constituents of human well being the principal idea is that what aristotle calls external goods wealth reputation power have at most an indirect bearing on the quality of our lives starting with aristotle s thoughts about this topic kraut increasingly modifies and occasionally rejects that stance he argues that the way in which we experience the world is what well being consists in a good internal life comprises in part pleasure but far more valuable is the quality of our emotional intellectual social and perceptual experiences these offer the potential for a richer and deeper quality of life than that which is available to many other animals a good human life is immeasurably better than that of a simple creature that feels only the pleasures of nourishment even if it felt pleasure for millions of years human life would be superior in opposition to contemporary discussions of well being which often appeal to a thought experiment devised by robert nozick kraut concludes that the quality of our lives consists entirely in the quality of our experiences while others hold that we must live in the real world to live well and that one s interior life has little or no value on its own kraut s interpretation of this thought experiment supports the opposite conclusion this expansive volume traces the rhetoric of reform across american history examining such pivotal periods as the american revolution slavery mccarthyism and today s gay liberation movement at a time when social movements led by religious leaders from louis farrakhan to pat buchanan are playing a central role in american politics james darsey connects this radical tradition with its prophetic roots public discourse in the west is derived from the greek principles of civility diplomacy compromise and negotiation on this model radical speech is often taken to be a symptom of social disorder not so contends darsey who argues that the rhetoric of reform in america represents the continuation of a tradition separate from the commonly accepted principles of the greeks though the links have gone unrecognized the american radical tradition stems not from aristotle he maintains but from the prophets of the hebrew bible what distinguishes clarissa from samuel richardson s other novels is richardson s unique awareness of how his plot would end in the inevitability of its conclusion in its engagement with virtually every category of human experience and in its author's desire to communicate religious truth e derek taylor suggests clarissa truly is the paradise lost of the eighteenth century arguing that clarissa's cohesiveness and intellectual rigor have suffered from the limitations of the lockean model frequently applied to the novel taylor turns to the writings of john norris a well known disciple of the theosophy of nicolas malebranche allusions to this first of locke's philosophical critics appear in each of the novel's installments and taylor persuasively documents how norris's ideas provided richardson with a usefully un lockean rhetorical grounding for clarissa further the writings of early feminists like norris's intellectual ally mary astell who viewed her arguments on behalf of women as compatible with her conservative and deeply held religious and political views provide richardson with the combination of progressive feminism and conservative theology that animate the novel in a convincing twist taylor offers a closely argued analysis of lovelace's oft stated declaration that he will not be out norris'd or out plotted by clarissa showing how the plot of the novel and the plot of all humans exist in the context of richardson's grand theological experiment within through and by a concurrence of divine energy this study examines the broad political contexts in which violence specifically domestic violence occurs the author argues that liberal and enlightenment notions of the social contract rationality and egalitarianism the ideas that constitute norms of good citizenship are inextricably linked to violence according to this dynamic targets of abuse are viewed as being irrational incapable of making good choices or negotiating with their abusers or otherwise violating norms of the social contract they are in other words second class citizens in fact as the author shows drawing from nietzsche and foucault s theories of power and arguing against much of the standard literature on domestic violence the very mechanisms that purportedly help targets of domestic abuse actually work to compound the problem by exacerbating or ignoring the power differences between the abuser and the abused the key to preventing domestic violence the author contends lies in seeing it as a political rather than a personal issue that has political consequences enlightenment ideas about intimacy that conceive of personal relationships as mutual equal and contractual must be challenged as well as policy ideas that suggest targets of abuse can simply choose to leave abusive relationships without other personal or economic consequences from publisher description
