in research on information structure there is an ongoing discussion about the role of contrast while most linguists consider contrast to be compatible with both focus and topic some argue that it is an autonomous is category contrast has been shown to be encoded by different linguistic means such as specific morphemes adverbials clefts prosodic cues hence this concept is also related to other domains in particular morphosyntax and prosody the precise way in which they interact is however not yet entirely clear moreover from a methodological point of view the identification and annotation of contrast in corpora is not straightforward this volume provides a selection of articles discussing the definition of contrast the importance of distinguishing different types of contrast the use of several encoding strategies and the annotation of contrast in corpora using the question under discussion model the contributions offer data on english french french belgian sign language german hindi italian and spanish the polarity of a sentence is crucial for its meaning it is thus hardly surprising that languages have developed devices to highlight this meaning component and to contrast statements with negative and positive polarity in discourse research on this issue has started from languages like german and dutch where prosody and assertive particles are systematically associated with polarity contrast recently the grammatical realization of polarity contrast has been at the center of investigations in a range of other languages as well core questions concern the formal repertoire and the exact meaning contribution of the relevant devices the kind of contrast they evoke and their relation to information structure and sentence mood this volume brings together researchers from a theoretical an empirical and a typological orientation and enhances our understanding of polarity with the help of in depth analyses and cross linguistic comparisons dealing with the syntactic semantic pragmatic and or prosodic aspects of the phenomenon
