Information Required with Applications for Loans to States, Counties, Municipalities, and Other Public Bodies 1933: a complete guide to obtaining bank loans and all other types of financing.

Information Required with Preliminary Applications for Loans for Low-cost Housing Or Slum Clearance Projects; August 11, 1933 1933: the transmission of monetary policy to credit aggregates and the real economy can be impaired by weaknesses in the contracting environment, shallow financial markets, and a concentrated banking system. We empirically assess the bank lending channel in Uganda during 2010-2014 using a supervisory dataset of loan applications and granted loans. Our analysis focuses on a short period during which the policy rate rose by 1,000 basis points and then came down by 1,200 basis points. We find that an increase in interest rates reduces the supply of bank credit both on the extensive and intensive margins, and there is significant pass-through to retail lending rates. We document a strong bank balance sheet channel as the lending behavior of banks with high capital and liquidity is different from that of banks with low capital and liquidity. Finally, we show the impact of monetary policy on real activity across districts depends on banking sector conditions. Overall, our results indicate significant real effects of the bank lending channel in developing countries.

Small Business Loans 1977: using information from 193 banks in 58 countries, the authors develop and analyze indicators of physical access, affordability, and eligibility barriers to deposit, loan, and payment services. They find substantial cross-country variation in barriers to banking and show that in many countries, these barriers can potentially exclude a significant share of the population from using banking services. Correlations with bank and country-level variables show that bank size and the availability of physical infrastructure are the most robust predictors of barriers. Further the authors find evidence that in more competitive open and transparent economies and in countries with better contractual and informational frameworks banks impose lower barriers finally though foreign banks seem to charge higher fees than other banks in foreign dominated banking systems fees are lower and it is easier to open bank accounts and to apply for loans on the other hand in systems that are predominantly government owned customers pay lower fees but also face greater restrictions in terms of where to apply for loans and how long it takes to have applications processed these findings have important implications for policy reforms to broaden access

College Facilities Loan Program 1991 we propose a stress testing framework of credit risk which analyzes macro financial linkages generates consistent forecasts of macro financial variables and projects non performing loans npl on the basis of such forecasts economic contractions are generally associated with increases in npl however despite the common assumption used in the empirical literature of homogeneous impact across banks the strength of this relationship is often bank specific and imposing homogeneity may lead to over or underestimating the resilience of the financial system to macroeconomic woes our approach accounts for banks heterogeneous reaction to macro financial shocks in a dynamic context and potential cross sectional dependence across banks caused by common shocks an application to ecuador suggests that substantial heterogeneity is present and that this should be taken into account when trying to anticipate inflections in the quality of portfolio
