jehovah jireh god provides but how for whom and most urgently when trust in god is an easy catchphrase for believers but dr cornelius quek claims that many christians haven t actually experienced what it means to actively wholeheartedly uncomplainingly give their financial security and daily needs to god for anyone in need who cognitively knows that god provides financially but lacks experiential proof this book presents the opportunity to understand god s care in a whole new light while being inspired by cornelius s own testimonies of god s miraculous provision cornelius goes beyond superficial speculation about god and money to prove that the key to our provision is in the past god doesn t just provide he has already provided from heaven s perspective provision is a done deal it s the christian s current reality not just a good idea for the future the biblical keys prayers and declarations in each chapter will enable believers to experience god s provision for themselves right here right now this dissertation consists of three chapters which explore various aspects of the political economy of publicly provided goods i shed light on why governments do or do not invest in goods of different types and also how government versus private provision affects consumers what follows are three empirical analyses testing the implications of competing theoretical models my first chapter addresses the question what drives governments with similar revenues to publicly provide very different amounts of goods for which private substitutes are available key examples are education and health care i compare spending by brazilian municipalities on pre primary education a good that is also provided privately with spending on public infrastructure like parks and roads which lacks private substitutes i find that municipalities with higher median income and more inequality are less likely to allocate revenue to education or to expand pre primary enrollment they are more likely to allocate revenue to public infrastructure this seems to occur for two reasons in rich and unequal municipalities fewer total people support public education spending the collective choice channel and also any given poor person wanting public education has less influence over policymakers there the political power channel my second chapter addresses the question can private sector participation psp in the urban piped water sector improve child health a fixed effects analysis suggests that the introduction of psp decreases diarrhea among under five children by between 2.2 and 2.6 percentage points or 14.16 an instrumental variables analysis that uses variation in the share of the world water market controlled by former colonizing countries suggests that the effects are twice as large the difference between the ols and the iv results can be explained by the fact that psp is more likely when the water sector is distressed and causing health problems importantly psp appears to benefit the health of children from the poorest households the most it also leads to higher rates of reliance on piped water as the primary water source which is a likely channel explaining child health improvements my third chapter joint with john hatfield examines how competition between governments affects economic growth we find that doubling the number of local governments in a metropolitan area increases the income growth rate over 1969-2006 by 18 which implies an approximate 3900 difference in 2006 income decomposing this effect we find that 60 stems from inter jurisdictional competition changing the composition of the workforce while 40 comes from making existing workers more productive the results support a formal model showing that competition for capital drives local governments to provide productive public goods at levels which maximize economic growth hatfield 2010
