the english reformers of the 1530s with thomas cromwell at their head continued to have a strong belief in kingly rule and authority in contrast to their radical approach to the power of the pope and the roman catholic church resisting the king was tantamount to resisting god in their eyes and even on a matter of conscience the will of the king should prevail yet just over 100 years later charles i was called the man of blood and oliver cromwell famously declared that we will cut off his head with the crown on it but how did we get from the one to the other how did the deferential reformation become a regicidal revolution following on from his biography of thomas cromwell john schofield examines how the english character and the way it perceived royal rule changed between the time of thomas cromwell and that of his great great grandnephew oliver thomas lord cromwell is an elizabethan history play depicting the life of thomas cromwell 1st earl of essex the minister of king henry viii of england the play was entered into the stationers register on august 11 1602 and was published in quarto later the same year by bookseller william cotton the title page of q1 specifies that the play was acted by the lord chamberlain s men and attributes the play to a w s a second quarto q2 was printed in 1613 by thomas snodham the q2 title page repeats the data of q1 though the lord chamberlain s men are now the king s men the name change having occurred in 1603 the w s of the quartos was first identified as william shakespeare when publisher philip chetwinde added the play to the second impression of his shakespeare third folio in 1664 modern scholars reject the shakespearean attribution speculation relying on common initials has shone on wentworth smith and william sly as possible alternatives individual critics have also suggested thomas heywood and michael drayton as possible authors suggestions unsupported by firm evidence indeed scholars have disagreed about almost every aspect of the play it has been dated as early as 1582 3 and as late as 1599 1600 the play is primarily political commentary or religious propaganda baldwin maxwell argued that the play has a discontinuous nature the first half through act iii scene ii is dramaturgically well crafted while the second half is disorganized and loosely put together maxwell interpreted this as indicating that the extant text was the telescoped condensation of a two part original alternatively others have suggested that the play is a collaboration between two unequal partners or a work that was left incomplete by its original creator and finished by another hand it is thought that william shakespeare contributed to the writing of this play
