The Chronicle of World History 2008

the priorities of medieval chroniclers and historians were not those of the modern historian nor was the way that they gathered arranged and presented evidence yet if we understand how they approached their task and their assumption of god's immanence in the world much that they wrote becomes clear many of them were men of high intelligence whose interpretation of events sheds clear light on what happened christopher given wilson is one of the leading authorities on medieval english historical writing he examines how medieval writers such as ranulf higden and adam usk treated chronology and geography politics and warfare heroes and villains he looks at the ways in which chronicles were used during the middle ages and at how the writing of history changed between the twelfth and fifteenth centuries excerpt from the history and chronicles of scotland vol 1 the early part of the literary history of scotland is involved in much obscurity and has not been investigated with a due share either of care or of candour many eminent writers who adorned the reigns of the stuart's during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries are now in a great measure unknown or forgotten the difficulties these early writers had to encounter from the limited sources of information which they possessed the absence of authentic records to guide them in their researches the romantic and fabulous times of which they wrote and the want of science to operate as a check up on credulity seem entirely to have escaped those critics by whom their labours have been depreciated and their claims to the gratitude of posterity denied about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works the burgundian author jean de wavrin c 1400 c 1477 has been known to historians for a long time but his work is usually considered derivative and of little importance closer study reveals that he had an interesting career first serving in the anglo burgundian army then marrying a rich widow and settling down to a quieter life in lille where he composed his vast compilation of the histories of england at the same time he became a supplier of romances to philip the good duke of burgundy and an avid collector of all kinds of books himself a very unusual draughtsman whom he almost uniquely patronised was later named the wavrin master by art historians wavrin s life as a soldier and civilian ambassador and courtier is here presented as fully as possible and put into context his library and his interests are analysed and his own book its creation use of sources purpose and value are discussed and its often beautifully illustrated manuscripts described and explained the work is a major study of a neglected medieval chronicler who offers a unique perspective on events in england during the wars of the roses and the reign of edward iv there is a full index and detailed appendices examining the surviving manuscripts the papers collected in this volume focus on the sources for reconstructing the history of the third to fifth centuries ad the first section historiography looks at a small group of chronicles and breviaria whose texts are fundamental for our reconstruction of the history of the third and fourth centuries some well known others much less so eusebius of caesarea jerome the lost kaisergeschichte and eutropius in this section the goal in each case is a specific attempt to come to a better understanding of the structure composition date or author of these historical texts the second section history presents a group of historical studies ranging in time from the death of constantine in 337 to the vicennalia of anastasius in 511 in these papers the keys to the conclusions offered arise from a better understanding of the literary sources particularly chronicles and consularia an understanding of the evolution of historical accounts over time or the employment of sources that are either new or unusual in these particular contexts consular fasti coins papyri and itineraries in two centuries of rule over Egypt and North Africa 969-1171 CE the Isma'ili Fatimids threatened Sunni hegemony in the Arab heartlands yet left few historiographical records instead it fell to Ayyubid and Mamluk historians to represent the Fatimids to posterity did medieval Arab historians allow religious commitments and sectarian polemics to shape their accounts of the Islamic past and did the succeeding Sunni political class destroy the records of its Fatimid predecessors via a new translation contextualisation and analysis of Sunni Mamluk historian Ibn al-Furat's chronicle History of Dynasty and Kings Fozia Bora maps the survival of historiographical narratives from late Fatimid Egypt after Salah al-Din's alleged destruction of the Fatimid literary corpus in so doing Bora demonstrates that Mamluk historical works offer historiographical documentation of past eras of Islamic history through textual witnesses that are not otherwise extant she espouses a chronicle as archive framework arguing for a more objective use of chronicles as documents that go beyond sectarian polemics to act as archives of now lost material this book is essential for all scholars working on the written culture and history of the medieval Islamic world and paves the way for a more nuanced and sensitive treatment of Arabic chronicles
