this book presents a new classification of speech acts it is an alter native to all previously published classifications of speech acts the classification proposed here is based on an extensive set of data name lyon all the verbs designating linguistic activities and aspects thereof a theoretically and methodologically justifiable method is used to proceed in a number of steps from these data to the classification the classification is documented in a lexicon with two sections the first section exhibits the classification in all its details each verb is listed to its meaning at the appropriate place in the classification according the second alphabetically ordered section enables one to locate the verbs classified in the first part the speech act classification as presented in this book has a number of consequences for linguistic theorizing the book makes advances in three linguistically relevant fields speech act theory lexicology and theory of meaning in speech act theory firstly of course a classifica tion is proposed which is theoretically justified and which is simul taneously based explicitly and systematically on linguistic data second ly a wider concept of speech acts is introduced which proves its value by making possible a linguistically justified classification thirdly the concept of speech act sequence or more generally partial order is brought into focus as a major organizational principle of the semantic relation between speech acts in the study of language as in any other systematic study there is no neutral terminology every technical term is an expression of the assumptions and theoretical presuppositions of its users and in this introduction we want to clarify some of the issues that have surrounded the assumptions behind the use of the two terms speech acts and pragmatics the notion of a speech act is fairly well understood the theory of speech acts starts with the assumption that the minimal unit of human communica tion is not a sentence or other expression but rather the performance of certain kinds of acts such as making statements asking questions giving orders describing explaining apologizing thanking congratulating etc characteristically a speaker performs one or more of these acts by uttering a sentence or sentences but the act itself is not to be confused with a sentence or other expression uttered in its performance such types of acts as those exemplified above are called following austin illocutionary acts and they are standardly contrasted in the literature with certain other types of acts such as perlocutionary acts and propositional acts perlocutionary acts have to do with those effects which our utterances have on hearers which go beyond the hearer's understanding of the utterance such acts as convincing persuading annoying amusing and frightening are all cases of perlocutionary acts this work consists of an examination and revision of some of the main theses of speech act theory in relation to the problem of ideology and action guiding language starting from the idea that linguistic philosophy must take into account how the social structure of the linguistic community may influence and direct the way its language is used a critical method of analysis is proposed developing speech act theory in a way suitable for this purpose the main guideline of this proposal is the consideration that a theory of action rather than a theory of meaning should be taken as central in the analysis of language the notion of illocutionary force the problem of intentions and conventions in the constitution of speech acts the definition of context and the classification of speech acts are then discussed based on the conclusions of this discussion a pragmatic method for the analysis of language is formulated this book first published in 1990 combines an introduction to speech act theory as developed by j l austin with a survey of critical essays that have adapted austin s thought for literary analysis speech act theory emphasizes the social reality created when speakers agree that their language is performative austin s term for utterances like we hereby declare or i promise that produce rather than describe what they name in contrast to formal linguistics speech act theory insists on language s active prominence in the organization of collective life the first section of the text concentrates on austin s determination to situate language in society by demonstrating the social conventions manifest in language the second and third parts of the book discuss literary critics responses to speech act theory s socialisation of language which have both opened new understandings of textuality in general and stimulated new interpretations of individual works this book will be of interest to students of linguistics and literary theory

English Conversation

this book collects seventeen essays published between 1984 and 2020 in which marina sbisà develops her distinctive approach to speech acts and related pragmatic phenomena drawing inspiration from the work of j l austin the essays examine the categories of speech act theory and apply these categories in the context of natural discourse and conversation with the aim of providing an accurate analysis of how speech can be action sbisà devotes particular attention to normative aspects of language and language use speech acts reshape the normative context in which they occur by assigning or unassigning deontic properties to relevant parties emphasis is placed on the normative aspect of linguistically mandated presuppositions as well as the rational grounds of implicature the conventionalist view of speech acts developed here turns on the role of intersubjective agreement in deontic updating in a framework that shifts focus from single utterances to discursive sequences and conversational interaction this view challenges the main tenets of a gricean intentionalist understanding of speech act performance paving the way for a theory of speech actions centred on the normatively transformative power of illocution throughout the essays examples and applications are given to illustrate how the view put forward contributes to understanding the social and political dimensions of linguistic activity such as hidden persuasive strategies power imbalances both within and outside the context of conversation and the relevance of language and discourse to gender issues the nature and function of language as man's chief vehicle of communication occupies a focal position in the human sciences particularly in philosophy the concept of communication is problematic because it suggests both meaning the nature of language and the activity of speaking the function of language the philosophic theory of speech acts is one attempt to clarify the ambiguities of speech as both the use of language to describe states of affair and the process in which that description is generated as communication the present study speech act phenomenology is in part an examination of speech act theory the theory offers an explanation for speech performance that is the structure of speech acts as relationships and the content of speech acts as meaning the primary statement of the speech act theory that is examined is that presented by austin a secondary concern is the formulation of the theory as presented by searle and grice the limitations of the speech act theory are specified by applying the theory as an explanation of human communication this conceptual examination of communication suggests that the philosophic method of analysis does not resolve the antinomy of language nature and function basically the conceptual distinctions of the speech act theory i.e. locutions illocutions and perlocutions are found to be empty as a comprehensive explanation of the concept communication

The Analysis of Speech Act Verbs

at the birth of analytic philosophy Frege created a paradigm that is centrally important to how meaning has been understood in the twentieth century. Frege invented the now familiar distinctions of sense and reference of concept and object. He introduced the conception of sentence meaning as residing in truth conditions and argued that semantics is a normative enterprise distinct from psychology. Most importantly, he created modern quantification theory, engendering the idea that the syntactic and semantic forms of modern logic underpin the meanings of natural language sentences. Stephen Barker undertakes to overthrow Frege's paradigm, rejecting all the above-mentioned features. The framework he offers is a speech act based approach to meaning in which semantics is entirely subsumed by pragmatics. In this framework, meaning resides in syntax and pragmatics; sentence meanings are not propositions but speech act types; word meanings are not objects, functions, or properties but again speech act types. Pragmatic phenomena one would expect not to figure in semantics, such as pretence, enter into the logical form of sentences. A compositional semantics is provided by showing how speech act types combine together to form complex speech act types. The syntactic structures invoked are not those of quantifiers, open sentences, variables, variable binding, etc. Rather, they are structures specific to speech act forms which link logical form and surface grammar very closely. According to Barker, a natural language is a system of thought, an emergent entity that arises from the combination of simple intentional structures and certain non-representational cognitive states. It is embedded in and part of a world devoid of normative facts, qua extra-linguistic entities. The world in which the system is embedded is a totality of particular states of affairs; there is no logical complexity in it; it contains mereological complexity only. Some truths have truth-makers, but others, logically complex truths, lack them. Nevertheless, the truth predicate is univocal in meaning. Renewing meaning is a radical, ambitious work which offers to transform the semantics of natural language.
