domain of hydrology includes the physical chemical and biological reactions of water in natural and man made environments work in teams of two or three to identify specific examples of hydrology in civil engineering and highlight why it is important in that application be prepared to discuss one of your examples in hydrology we study hydrologic cycle its processes water balance precipitation types estimation of precipitation and analysis of precipitation data we also study infiltration phenomena solution of the richard s equation and approximate infiltration models the hydrologic exchange of groundwater and rivers in a landscape is controlled by the distribution and magnitude of hydraulic conductivities both within the channel and the associated aquifer the relation of stream stage to the adjacent groundwater level and geomorphology especially in terms of the geometry and position of the stream
