Teacher Involvement in High-Stakes Language Testing

2018-04-27

this book advocates that teachers should play an active role in high stakes language testing and that more weight should be given to teacher judgement this is likely to increase the formative potential of high stakes tests and provide teachers with a sense of ownership the implication is that the knowledge and skills they develop by being involved in these tests will feed into their own classroom practices the book also considers the arguments against teacher involvement e g the contention that teacher involvement might entrench the practice of teaching to the test or that teachers should not be actively involved in high stakes language testing because their judgement is insufficiently reliable using contributions from a wide range of international educational contexts the book proposes that a lack of reliability in teacher judgement is best addressed by means of training and not by barring educators from participating in high stakes language testing it also argues that their involvement in testing helps teachers to bolster confidence in their own judgement and develop their assessment literacy moreover teacher involvement empowers them to play a role in reforming high stakes language testing so that it is more equitable and more likely to enhance classroom practices high stakes language tests that adopt such an inclusive approach facilitate more effective learning on the part of teachers which ultimately benefits all their students

The Effects of Standardized Testing

2012-12-06

when george bernard shaw wrote his play pygmalion he could hardly have foreseen the use of the concept of the self fulfilling prophecy in debates about standardized testing in schools still less could he have foreseen that the validity of the concept would be examined many years later in irish schools while the primary purpose of the experimental study reported in this book was not to investigate the pygmalion effect it is inconceivable that a study of the effects of standardized testing conceived in the 1960s and planned and executed in the 1970s would not have been influenced by thinking about teachers expectations and the influence of test information on the formation of those expectations while our study did pay special attention to teacher expectations its scope was much wider it was planned and carried out in a much broader framework one in which we set out to examine the impact of a standardized testing program not just on teachers but also on school practices students and students parents
