lo jung pang argues that during each of the three periods when imperial china embarked on maritime enterprises the qin and han dynasties the sui and early tang dynasties and song yuan and early ming dynasties coastal states took the initiative at a time when china was divided maritime trade and exploration subsequently peaked when china was strong and unified and declined as chinese power weakened at such times china s people became absorbed by internal affairs and state policy focused on threats from the north and the west these cycles of maritime activity each lasting roughly five hundred years corresponded with cycles of cohesion and division strength and weakness prosperity and impoverishment expansion and contraction in the early 21st century a strong and outward looking china is again building up its navy and seeking maritime dominance with important implications for trade diplomacy and naval affairs events will not necessarily follow the same course as in the past but lo jung pang s analysis suggests useful questions for the study of events as they unfold and decades to come

John Rae is best known today as the first European to reveal the fate of the Franklin expedition yet the range of Rae's accomplishments is much greater over five expeditions. Rae mapped some 1,550 miles (2,494 kilometres) of Arctic coastline. He is undoubtedly one of the Arctic's greatest explorers yet today his significance is all but lost. John Rae Arctic Explorer is an annotated version of Rae's unfinished autobiography. William Barr has extended Rae's previously unpublished manuscript and completed his story based on Rae's reports and correspondence including reaction to his revelations about the Franklin expedition. Barr's meticulously researched long overdue presentation of Rae's life and legacy is an immensely valuable addition to the literature of Arctic exploration.

This book offers an original examination of human cognition arguing that cognitive skills are dispositional in nature, opposing influential views in modern Anglo-American philosophy. Gundersen starts from the received premise that knowledge is analyzable in terms of belief, justification, and truth and goes on to clarify and improve on these ingredients' exact nature and internal association. Exploring a wide range of arguments offered by influential contributors in the field of modal epistemology, Gundersen argues that external conditions are secondary in developing and cultivating cognitive competence and that the fulcrum of the cognitive investigation is the fascinating interplay between and cultivation of internal cognitive powers.
