this volume presents the proceedings of the international workshop on artificial neural networks iwann 95 held in torremolinos near malaga spain in june 1995 the book contains 143 revised papers selected from a wealth of submissions and five invited contributions it covers all current aspects of neural computation and presents the state of the art of ann research and applications the papers are organized in sections on neuroscience computational models of neurons and neural nets organization principles learning cognitive science and ai neurosimulators implementation neural networks for perception and neural networks for communication and control the sharp realities of financial globalization become clear during crises when winners and losers emerge crises usher in short and long term changes to the status quo and everyone agrees that learning from crises is a top priority the evidence and impact of financial globalization devotes separate articles to specific crises the conditions that cause them and the longstanding arrangements devised to address them while other books and journal articles treat these subjects in isolation this volume presents a wide ranging consistent yet varied specificity substantial authoritative and useful these articles provide material unavailable elsewhere substantial articles by top scholars sets this volume apart from other information sources rapidly developing subjects will interest readers well into the future reader demand and lack of competitors underline the high value of these reference works nr 64 Śladkowska j polynômes quasi univalents et univalents 1960 first published in 1919 this volume provides a detailed linguistic breakdown of the bantu language family of central and southern africa its author held in situ expertise in nanja swahili zulu giriyama and pokomo a professor of swahili and bantu languages she was the author of several books on bantu languages and african peoples the volume aims to depict the broad principles underlying the structure of the bantu language family and attempts a classification of those languages contemporaneous with the colonization of tanzania many of the areas to which this volume was relevant were under british control at the time of publication abstract government spending in developing countries typically account for between 15 and 30 percent of gdp hence small changes in the efficiency of public spending could have a major impact on gdp and on the attainment of the government s objectives the first challenge that stakeholders face is measuring efficiency this paper attempts such quantification and has two major parts the first part estimates efficiency as the distance between observed input output combinations and an efficiency frontier defined as the maximum attainable output for a given level of inputs this frontier is estimated for several health and education output indicators by means of the free disposable hull fdh and data envelopment analysis dea techniques both input inefficiency excess input consumption to achieve a level of output and output inefficiency output shortfall for a given level of inputs are scored in a sample of 140 countries using data from 1996 to 2002 the second part of the paper seeks to verify empirical regularities of the cross country variation in efficiency results show that countries with higher expenditure levels register lower efficiency scores as well as countries where the wage bill is a larger share of the government s budget similarly countries with higher ratios of public to private financing of the service provision score lower efficiency as do countries plagued by the hiv aids epidemic and those with higher income inequality countries with higher aid dependency ratios also tend to score lower in efficiency probably due to the volatility of this type of funding that impedes medium term planning and budgeting though no causality may be inferred from this exercise it points at different factors to understand why some countries might need more resources than others to achieve similar educational and health outcomes this book presents a theory of consciousness which is unique and sustainable in nature based on physiological and cognitive linguistic principles controlled by a number of socio psycho economic factors in order to anchor this theory which draws upon various disciplines the author presents a number of different theories all of which have been abundantly studied by scientists from both a theoretical and experimental standpoint including models of social organization ego theories theories of the motivational system in psychology theories of the motivational system in neurosciences language modeling and computational modeling of motivation the theory presented in this book is based on the hypothesis that an individual s main activities are developed by self motivation managed as an informational need this is described in chapters covering self motivation on a day to day basis the notion of need the hypothesis and control of cognitive self motivation and a model of self motivation which associates language and physiology the subject of knowledge extraction is also covered including the impact of self motivation on
