until now there has been very little research into the use of online dictionaries in contrast the market for online dictionaries is increasing both for academic lexicography and for commercial lexicography with sales figures for printed reference works in continual decline this has led to a demand for reliable empirical information on how online dictionaries are actually being used and how they could be made more user friendly the volume using online dictionaries makes a substantial contribution to closing this research gap it is divided into four parts the first part contains articles on fundamental issues a research review of the empirical studies on digital dictionaries which have already been carried out and a brief methodological guideline for lexicographical researchers who are interested in conducting their own empirical research the second part contains the results of two studies that focus on general questions about the use of online dictionaries it presents empirical data on contexts of dictionary use on expectations and demands regarding online dictionaries furthermore innovative features such as the use of multimedia elements or the option of a user adaptive interface and questions of design were assessed empirically the third part of this volume comprises more specific studies of online dictionaries an eye tracking study evaluating the new web design of the dictionary portal owid and a log file study which tries to get to the bottom of the following question do dictionary users look up frequent words or put differently is there a connection between how often a word is looked up and how often it appears in a corpus in the last chapter of this thematic section the question of how users judge the combination of a written paraphrase and an additional illustration in illustrated online dictionaries is addressed the last part focuses on the use of monolingual dictionaries in particular the german online dictionary elexiko in this context two online questionnaire based studies were carried out the empirical studies were conducted in the form of online surveys combining questionnaires and experimental elements and in the form of laboratory studies using eye tracking technology as well as using observational methods such as log file analyses regarding the comprehensive research framework this volume can be relevant to lexicographers metalexicographers and linguists who are interested in the use of online dictionaries and in the development and exploration of lexicographical data for the internet as well as linguists interested in empirical methods it addresses a broad expert audience by presenting an academic subject which is currently the focus of much discussion advances in the practice of psychiatry have occurred in fits and starts over the last several decades these advances are evident to anyone long affiliated with the field and are best appreciated through direct experience of living through the times these advances can also be gleaned from historical overviews in textbooks or the recollections of one's teachers and mentors returning to the original papers that have ushered in these changes is rarely done for various mostly practical reasons filtering through thousands of articles in psychiatry may prove daunting access to the manuscripts may be limited especially for papers not available electronically and understanding their impact requires a broader context moreover with so much active research currently occurring in various branches of psychiatry current practitioners or trainees may find their attention focused on the present and this is reinforced by electronic search algorithms which return articles in reverse chronological order not surprisingly citations for articles in virtually all fields decline precipitously for articles over five years old as scholars and professionals we are losing touch with our academic heritage yet navigating the future of psychiatry requires a firm understanding of its past this resource serves as a guide for anyone seeking to understand the evolution of psychiatry as a scientific discipline it does so by summarizing over 100 landmark papers in psychiatry and placing their scientific contributions within a historical context an introductory section sets the stage for the major theoretical constructs within the field with chapters devoted to ontology and nosology subsequent sections examine major facets of the theory and practice of psychiatry such as pathogenesis of psychiatric illness pharmacotherapy psychotherapy and somatic treatments these sections are divided logically into chapters addressing important contributions to the understanding and treatment of specific disorders a final section explores ethical considerations within each field this framework echoes the complexity of psychiatry which cannot be reduced to a single set of diagnoses or subspecialty categories highlighting the research trajectory of psychiatry this resource will appeal to academics trainees and practitioners who desire a comprehensive easy to read up to date collection of psychiatry's pivotal moments by understanding the challenges inspirations and insights from the past readers will be better poised to address new and ongoing challenges within the field in reconstructing response to student writing dan melzer makes the argument that writing instructors should shift the construct so that peer response and student self assessment are more central than teacher response presenting the results of a national study of teacher and peer response and student self assessment at institutions of higher education across the united states melzer analyzes teacher and peer response to over 1 000 pieces of student writing as well as 128 student portfolio reflection essays he draws on his analysis and on a comprehensive review of the literature on response to introduce a constructivist heuristic for response aimed at both composition instructors and instructors across disciplines melzer argues that teachers and researchers should focus less on teacher response to individual pieces of student writing and more on engaging in dialogue with student self assessment and peer response focusing on growth and transfer rather than products and grades reconstructing response to student writing especially when taken together with melzer's previous book assignments across the curriculum provides a comprehensive and large scale view of college writing and responding across the curriculum in the united states the role of ros rns signaling in cardiovascular functions and diseases is increasingly emerging in the last decades the involvement of ros rns in the control of a large number of cardiovascular functions like the regulation of the vascular tone the control of blood pressure or myocyte excitation contraction coupling and force development has been broadly investigated and in part clarified on the other hand many efforts have been focused in clarifying the redox mechanisms involved in cardiovascular diseases like ischemia reperfusion injury diabetes associated cardiovascular dysfunctions atherosclerosis or hypertension just to mention the major ones however in most cases the two levels of investigation remain separate and not interlaced failing in the attempt to provide a unified vision of the pathophysiologic mechanisms of cardiovascular diseases the major aim of the research topic has been to collect original papers and review articles dealing with the issue from basic to translation research point of views the topic includes contributions that highlight different interesting aspects of cardiovascular biology with an integrated approach useful for the development of new ideas and advancements in the field of redox signaling in the control of normal cardiovascular functions and their disruption in diseases the one issue touched on repeatedly by the contributors of this publication is the difficulty of arriving at a definition of cyber terrorism a nato office of security document cautiously defines it as a cyber attack using or exploiting computer or communication networks to cause sufficient destruction or disruption to generate fear or to intimidate a society into an ideological goal but the cyber world is surely remote from what is recognized as terrorism the bloody attacks and ethnic conflicts or more precisely the politically motivated intention to cause death or serious bodily harm to civilians or non combatants with the purpose of intimidating a population or compelling a government un report freedom from fear 2005 it is hard to think of an instance when computer code has physically harmed anyone yet a number of contributors show that exactly such events potentially on a huge scale can be expected for example attacks on critical infrastructure in particular on scada supervisory control and data acquisition systems which control physical processes in places like chemical factories dams and power stations a part of the publication examines cyber terrorism in the proper sense of the term and how to respond in terms of technology awareness and legal political measures however there is also the related question of responding to the terrorist presence on the internet so called terrorist contents here the internet is not a weapon but an important tool for terrorists communications coordination training recruiting and information gathering on the targets of planned attacks this paper examines how countries use macroprudential policies maps to respond to external shocks such as us monetary policy surprises or fluctuations in capital flows constructing a model of a small open economy with financial frictions and a map authority that adjusts loan to value ltv ratio limits on borrowers and capital adequacy ratio car limits on banks we show that using maps where stochastic external financial shocks are present entails a trade off between macro financial volatility and gdp growth the terms of the trade off are a function of a few country characteristics that amplify financial channels of external monetary shocks estimating map reaction functions for a panel of 41 countries in the period 2000 2017 we find that countercyclical macroprudential policy in response to surprise us monetary tightening is more likely for countries with net short currency mismatches that is foreign currency denominated liabilities larger than foreign currency denominated assets consistent with the model s predictions the paper also finds that domestic credit and interest rates are more insulated from us monetary tightening for countries that employ maps countercyclically
