path breaking work takes the lid off peace operations to explore missions e g disarmament demobilization and reintegration that go beyond traditional peacekeeping and the ways mission outcomes influence one another this work begins by documenting patterns of peacekeeping missions in 70 un operations noting the dramatic increase in number and diversity since the end of the cold war and the shift to conflicts with a substantial internal conflict component the core of the book examines eight expectations about how different missions interact with one another the expectations are guided by theoretical logics associated with sequencing compatibility and multitasking these are examined in five detailed case studies of un operations united nations protection force or unprofor bosnia united nations operation in the congo or onuc congo united nations transitional administration in east timor or untaet east timor united nations organization mission in the democratic republic of the congo or monuc congo and the united nations mission in sierra leone or unamsil sierra leone the final chapter reviews the findings in terms of their implications for the expectations it also provides a policy relevant framework for organizing the various parts and stages of a peace operation offering a future research agenda on multiple mission peacekeeping the main corpus of film adaptation thus far has focused on films based on canonical literature from film adaptation to post celluloid adaptation takes the next logical step by discussing the emerging modes of film adaptation from older media to new mainly focusing on the computer generated reconstructions of popular narratives and characters along with other forms of convergence such as the internet while new media is a broad concept the book will concentrate on the ways digital technology is being used in the encoding of films and discuss the ways this shift can be debated from a theoretical perspective though the discussion is framed through the new media lens the work will not exclude a broader understanding of new media which
