managing historic sites and buildings looks at the choices and the tensions that exist in conservation and interpretation of the heritage preservation and presentation are central activities arguably means and ends in the conservation of the historic environment but are they self reinforcing or do they work against each other in a series of essays which span from prehistoric sacred site to second world war military remains from medieval monastery to 1970s housing estate we look at contemporary concerns and debates about the way the past is shaped physically and metaphorically by these two aspects of heritage management starting from the position that the fundamental purpose of the whole process is to communicate understanding about the human past these essays examine how far the ideologies strategies tactics and techniques of preservation and presentation are mutually supportive the success of integrated approaches that are inclusive of social economic and green environmental concerns is understood but the value of developing truly sustainable management for individual historic places is only just becoming evident at the heart of such an approach lies a crucial relationship between the activity of preserving historic places and of promoting understanding of their significance it is over one hundred years since the publication of the wide ranging archaeological field investigation undertaken on the marlborough downs by the rev a c smith his work guide to the british and roman antiquities of the north wiltshire downs in a hundred square miles round abury was originally published in two volumes in 1884 by the marlborough college natural history society then reprinted and bound into a single volume and published in 1885 by the wiltshire archaeological and natural history society after half the original print run was destroyed in a fire as in most works of inventory the volume has certainly stood the test of time and is still one of the basic reference texts for students of the area since then apart from a few notable exceptions archaeological literature about the area has been largely site based and there has been little concerning the marlborough downs as a whole in order to try and redress this imbalance a day conference was organised in april 2002 at the university of bath swindon where it was possible to acknowledge and mark the ongoing validity of smith s work and where a number of papers on various aspects of recent research on the marlborough downs were presented the results of the conference are presented in this volume together with a number of other commissioned contributions from individuals who have undertaken research in the area during the last decade or so each essay stands alone but they are connected by a common theme that of the land and how it has changed over millennia real understanding of past societies is not possible without including children and yet they have been strangely invisible in the archaeological record compelling explanation about past societies cannot be achieved without including and investigating children and childhood however marginal the traces of children s bodies and bricolage may seem compared to adults archaeological evidence of children and childhood can be found in the most astonishing places and spaces the archaeology of childhood is one of the most exciting and challenging areas for new discovery about past societies children are part of every human society but childhood is a cultural construct each society develops its own idea about what a childhood should be what children can or should do and how they are trained to take their place in the world children also play a part in creating the archaeological record itself in this volume experts from around the world ask questions about childhood thresholds of age and growth childhood in the material culture the death of children and the intersection of the childhood and the social economic religious and political worlds of societies in the past archaeology of spiritualities provides a fresh exploration of the interface between archaeology and religion spirituality archaeological approaches to the study of religion have typically and often unconsciously drawn on western paradigms especially judaeo christian mono theistic frameworks and academic rationalisations archaeologists have rarely reflected on how these approaches have framed and constrained their choices of methodologies research questions hypotheses definitions interpretations and analyses and have neglected an important dimension of religion the human experience of the numinous the power presence or experience of the supernatural within the religions of many of the world s peoples sacred experiences particularly in relation to sacred landscapes and beings connected with those landscapes are often given greater emphasis while doctrine and beliefs are relatively less important archaeology of spiritualities asks how such experiences might be discerned in the archaeological record how do we recognize and investigate other forms of religious or spiritual experience in the remains of the past the volume opens up a space to explore critically and reflexively the encounter between archaeology and diverse cultural expressions of spirituality it showcases experiential and experimental methodologies in this area of the discipline an unconventional approach within the archaeology of religion thus archaeology of spiritualities offers a unique timely and innovative contribution one that is also challenging and stimulating it is a great resource to archaeologists historians religious scholars and others interested in cultural and religious heritage for one brief moment in the third millennium bce the galaxy levelled around the horizon bringing into view stars that would not be visible again in the northern hemisphere for twenty thousand years the spectacular southern cross dominated the night sky and it is the contention of this book that this event was marked by the neolithic people of britain by monuments such as avebury avebury henge marries archaeology with astronomy to show that the people who built avebury west kennet long barrow and silbury hill aligned them not only with the cycles of the sun moon and planets but also with the stars stonehenge is one of the most famous ancient monuments in the world and its solar alignment is one of its most important features yet although archaeologists have learned a huge amount about this iconic monument and its development a sense of mystery continues about its purpose this helps fuel numerous theories and common misconceptions particularly concerning its relationship to the sky and the heavenly bodies a desire to cut through this confusion was the inspiration for this book and it fills a gaping hole in the existing literature the book provides both an introduction to stonehenge and its landscape and an introduction to archaeoastronomy the study of how ancient peoples understood phenomena in the sky and what role the sky played in their cultures archaeoastronomy is a specialism critical to explaining the relationship of stonehenge and nearby monuments to the heavens but interpreting archaeoastronomical evidence has often proved highly controversial in the past stonehenge sighting the sun explains why it makes clear which ideas about stonehenge are generally accepted and which are not with clear graphics to explain complicated concepts this beautifully illustrated book shines new light on this most famous of ancient monuments and is the first in depth study of this fascinating topic suitable both for specialists and for anyone with a general interest
