today privacy is one of the most hotly debated topics worldwide the book aims to balance the development of personal rights in a country that has historically valued collective rights over those of the individual the protection of privacy is not an issue that has been emphasised during the rapid development of economic laws in china however the accompanying development of greater government based regulation of these laws implementation has led to greater invasions of personal privacy this study attempts to provide a way forward for china to address the ever increasing concerns about the protection of privacy and puts forward a legislative model for protection this is achieved after a thorough analysis of the threats to privacy protection in china a critical evaluation of the level of current privacy protection in china and an analysis of the privacy laws in a series of developed nations based on common law and civil law this book explores the interface between competition law and market integration in the application of article 102 of the treaty on the functioning of the european union tfeu focusing on the notion of market separation namely conduct that may hinder cross border trade the discussion reviews among other things the treatment of geographic price discrimination and exclusionary abuse by which out of state competitors are affected market separation cases are treated in the book as a case study for appraising the interface between competition and the internal market on this basis the book provides a comparative analysis of the treaty requirements under article 102 tfeu when applied in market separation cases and the treaty requirements under the free movement provisions in addition it utilises market separation cases as a springboard for advancing an informed reformulation of the application of article 102 tfeu when state action comes into play all in all the analysis presented in the book deconstructs the elements for establishing market separation as an abuse of the dominant position it shows that there is nothing that would justify a distinctive treatment of market separation under article 102 tfeu other than a principled understanding of internal market law as a whole whatever understanding one reaches about the proper shape of the internal market interrogation of the proper application of competition law comes after that and thus should be informed by this understanding

International Development Law 2007-01-30 this book advances a novel interpretation of eu governance its central claim is that the eu s regulatory successes within and increasingly beyond its borders rest on the emergence of a recursive process of framework rule making and revision by european and national actors across a wide range of policy domains in this architecture framework goals and measures for gauging their achievement are established by joint action of the member states and eu institutions lower level units are given the freedom to advance these ends as they see fit but in return for this autonomy they must report regularly on their performance and participate in a peer review in which their results are compared with those of others pursuing different means to the same general ends the framework goals performance measures and decision making procedures are themselves periodically revised by the actors including new participants whose views come to be seen as indispensable to full and fair deliberation the editors introduction sets out the core features of this experimentalist architecture and contrasts it to conventional interpretations of eu governance especially the principal agent conceptions underpinning many contemporary theories of democratic sovereignty and effective legitimate law making subsequent chapters by an interdisciplinary group of european and north american scholars explore the architecture s applicability across a series of key policy domains including data privacy financial market regulation energy competition food safety gmos environmental protection anti discrimination fundamental rights justice and home affairs and external relations their authoritative studies show both how recent developments often take an experimentalist turn but also admit of multiple contrasting interpretations or leave open the possibility of reversion to more familiar types of governance the results will be indispensable for all those concerned with the nature of the eu and its contribution to contemporary governance beyond the nation state over the last decade the european union has undertaken major market opening reforms in the area of network industries the liberalization process has now been completed in the air transport and electronic communications sectors and has achieved considerable progress in other network industries such as postal services energy electricity and gas and rail transport creating competition in network industries is not an easy matter however because they benefit from certain advantages such as a large initial market share and control of essential facilities incumbents typically retain substantial market power in a number of relevant markets and may even use their position to prevent others from engineering such markets controlling market power is thus one of a number of key concerns in network industries it can be achieved in two main ways either through the adoption and implementation of sector specific rules or through the application of competition rules there are advantages and disadvantages to both options but it is a combination of the two that generally prevents incumbents from abusing their market power in liberalized markets competition law and sector specific regulation provide for the application of remedies on incumbents or other operators holding significant market power such remedies are either structural or a behavioural in some occasions they will apply ex ante while in others ex post this book comprises a collection of outstanding essays dealing with the complex legal and economic issues raised by remedies in network industries while some of these essays analyse remedies from a generic point of view others focus on specific remedies applied specifically in particular sectors the sectors covered in this volume include electronic communications postal services energy electricity and gas and air transport the final paper also presents a discussion of the united states approach to remedies in network industries the essays comprised in this book have been written by leading academics lawyers and economists as well as private practitioners
