Decision Making in the Workplace

2014-03-05

many if not most of one s important decisions are made in the context of one s work however because workplace decisions cover such a broad range of issues it often is difficult to detect underlying commonalities in how they are made and in how things go wrong when they do go wrong as a result there are nearly as many different descriptions of workplace decisions as there are decisions themselves in this volume the best features of these diverse descriptions are unified in a new intuitively compelling view of decision making called image theory the result is a clear picture of real life day to day workplace decision making that allows us to think constructively about how such decisions are made and about how to improve them when improvement is necessary

Developing Frontier Cities

2013-04-17

the unique nature of frontier cities and their development challenge harvey lithwick and yehuda grad us the advent of government downsizing and globalization has led to enormous competitive pressures as well as the opening of new opportunities how cities in remote frontier areas might cope with what for them might appear to be a devastating challenge is the subject of this book our concern is with frontier cities in particular in our earlier study frontiers in regional development rowman and littlefield 1996 we examined the distinction between frontiers and peripheries the terms are often used interchangeably but we believe that in fact both in scholarly works and in popular usage very different connotations are conveyed by these concepts frontiers evoke a strong positive image of sparsely settled territories offering challenges adventure unspoiled natural landscapes and a different and for many an attractive life style frontiers are lands of opportunity peripheries conjure up negative images of inaccessibility inadequate services and political and economic marginality they are places to escape from rather than frontiers which is where people escape to peripheries are places of and for losers

eden by design is a compelling and fascinating description of a possible los angeles that never came to be greg hise and william deverell have resurrected the olmsted brothers 1930 plan for los angeles county and then in a wonderful introduction put the plan in context so that to read it now is to see not only what seemed dangerous and possible in 1930 but also how and why one route to the present was chosen over others in their hands the plan acts like a ghost of los angeles reminding us about a vanished past lost possibilities and the secrets that our present masks richard white author of the organic machine the report is not only a vital document in the history of los angeles but a lost classic of a neglected golden age of city planning and landscape architecture it embodies a truly regional perspective an ecological perspective a long range vision an integration of design with finance and administration and a truly grand interpretation of public space it deserves to be known to every serious student of the american planning tradition robert fishman author of bourgeois utopias the rise and fall of suburbia an essential document for understanding the history of the west s largest city los angeles had the opportunity to become an extraordinarily beautiful environment a paris in the desert the editors make clear why sadly it did not but also they hold out hope that portions of this brilliant but neglected plan might still be recovered donald worster author of nature s economy a history of ecological ideas a welcome addition to the literature of american urban planning history roger montgomery professor of architecture emeritus university of california berkeley
