Questioning Qualitative Inquiry 2008-07-10

is qualitative research in crisis in questioning qualitative inquiry martyn hammersley raises fundamental questions about the current state of qualitative social research he examines some of the changes that have taken place within it over the past fifty years suggesting that the move away from natural science as a model and towards an appeal to literature and art involves rejection of key principles that are essential to research of any kind hammersley argues that in important respects qualitative inquiry has not lived up to the claims originally made on its behalf and that more recent developments have worsened the situation insufficient attention has been given to the problems surrounding leading ideas like thick description analytic induction and constructionism the argument is pursued through discussion of the work of influential writers such as clifford geertz denzin and lincoln and by detailed examination of concrete issues like the value of interview data the rationales for discourse and conversation analysis the role of rhetoric in research reports and the nature of assessment criteria at a time when qualitative inquiry is coming under renewed challenge in some quarters the task of addressing the methodological problems it faces has become urgent these essays on current developments and debates are essential reading for anyone interested in the future of qualitative research
