Foreign Direct Investment, Regulations and Growth

2006

this paper explores the linkage between income growth rates and foreign direct investment fdi inflows so far the evidence is rather mixed as no robust relationship between fdi and income growth has been established the authors argue that countries need a sound business environment in the form of good government regulations to be able to benefit from fdi using a comprehensive data set for regulations they test this hypothesis and find evidence that excessive regulations restrict growth through fdi only in the most regulated economies this result holds true for different specifications of the econometric model including instrumental variable regressions world bank web site asking the question of whether foreign direct investment fdi is integrating the world economy this comprehensive volume consists of an overview of current fdi research while the term integrating is often used the real test should be whether fdi is instrumental in bringing per capita incomes across countries closer together by this yardstick the answer is no the forces driving fdi are strong they lead it to flow to countries with attractive investment conditions and moreover investors have a tendency to follow each other it is in such settings that fdi appears to have the most beneficial effect in raising growth written by an authority in this area ashoka mody this book will greatly appeal to all international and development economists

Foreign Direct Investment and the Multinational Enterprise

Regional Integration and Foreign Direct Investment

abstract may 2000 how much a developing country can take advantage of technology transfer from foreign direct investment depends partly on how well educated and well trained its workforce is how much it is willing to invest in research and development and how much protection it offers for intellectual property rights saggi surveys the literature on trade and foreign direct investment especially wholly owned subsidiaries of multinational firms and international joint ventures as channels for technology transfer he also discusses licensing and other arm s length channels of technology transfer he concludes how trade encourages growth depends on whether knowledge spillover is national or international spillover is more likely to be national for developing countries than for industrial countries local policy often makes pure foreign direct investment infeasible so foreign firms choose licensing or joint ventures the jury is still out on whether licensing or joint ventures lead to more learning by local firms policies designed to attract foreign direct investment are proliferating several plant level studies have failed to find positive spillover from foreign direct investment to firms competing directly with subsidiaries of multinationals however these studies treat foreign direct investment as exogenous and assume spillover to be horizontal when it may be vertical all such studies do find the subsidiaries of multinationals to be more productive than domestic firms so foreign direct investment does result in host countries using resources more effectively absorptive capacity in the host country is essential for getting significant benefits from foreign direct investment without adequate human capital or investments in research and development spillover fails to materialize a country s policy on protection of intellectual property rights affects the type of industry it attracts firms for which such rights are crucial such as pharmaceutical firms are unlikely to invest directly in countries where such protections are weak or will not invest in manufacturing and research and development activities policy on intellectual property rights also influences whether technology transfer comes through licensing joint ventures or the establishment of wholly owned subsidiaries this paper a product of trade development research group is part of a larger effort in the group to study microfoundations of international technology diffusion the study was funded by the bank s research support budget under the research project microfoundations of international technology diffusion the author may be contacted at ksaggi mail smu edu

Trade, foreign direct investment, and international technology transfer : a survey

in this book nagesh kumar and expert contributors examine and explain the emerging patterns in international technology transfers and foreign direct investment flows fdis over the past two decades they analyse the trends in internationalization of corporate activity in individual source countries discussing outflows from both major and emerging source countries this departs from the existing treatments of fdi as homogenous resource and allows for a more detailed prediction of future outflow patterns throughout the research focuses upon the implications of new trends for developing countries kumar concludes by outlining the policy implications for the governments of such countries seeking to mobilize technology and fdi for their industrialization and further integration into the international community controversially he cautions against excessive optimism about the potential of fdi inflows as an agent of development this book draws together much data and information which is not readily available and provides reflections upon international business negotiations from a developing country s perspective the report reviews lessons from the international finance corporation s ifc investment and advisory experience in the developing world which show the interactions between policy frameworks and the volume and structure of foreign direct investments fdi case studies show how the corporation promotes successful project structures and regulatory changes as it tries to attain the strongest development impact for investments in developing countries fdi has flowed mainly into manufacturing and processing industries in the past investment attractiveness had been closely linked to possession of natural resources or a large domestic market while production and trade globalization competitiveness as a location for investment and exporting have become the main determinants of attractiveness sources of fdi in the past came almost exclusively from industrial countries though recently those sources have widened emerging from developing countries in their own right and for their own regions ifc as an international initiative to promote fdi in developing countries is liable to promote bilateral trade agreements bilateral and multilateral financial institutions and investment promotion programs its advisory role may vary from diagnostic studies overviewing constraints to fdi to investment policy studies giving specific solutions on either changes or strategies the study further looks at how policy environment is set and at finding investor opportunities through project financing largely structured as joint ventures the inherent fragile nature of joint ventures restricts foreign ownership thus limiting project structures however careful project design has lead to successful operations by ensuring management and financial arrangements still to maximize benefits an unfinished agenda of policy reform remains and as more countries open to fdi this integration will lead to an overall increase in fdi flows this paper examines the effect of the efficiency of the education system on foreign direct investment fdi first it focuses on the external efficiency and applies a frontier based measure as a proxy of the ability of countries to optimally convert the average years of schooling into income for individuals second it shows the relationship between the external efficiency of the education system and fdi inflows by applying gmm regression technique the results show that the efficiency level varies across regions and countries and appears to be driven by higher education and secondary vocational education similarly to other studies in the literature there is no significant relationship between the average years of schooling and fdi inflows however this study shows that the external efficiency of the education system is important for fdi inflows improving the external efficiency of the education system can play a role in attracting fdi especially in non resource rich countries nonlandlocked countries and countries in the low and medium human development groups

Encouraging Trade and Foreign Direct Investment in Ukraine

how can countries in the underdeveloped world position themselves to take best advantage of the positive economic benefits of globalization one avenue to success is the harnessing of foreign direct investment fdi in the nontraditional forms of the high technology and service sectors where an educated workforce is essential and the spillover effects to other sectors are potentially very beneficial in this book roy nelson compares efforts in three latin american countries brazil chile and costa rica to attract nontraditional fdi and analyzes the reasons for their relative success or failure as a further comparison he uses the successes of fdi promotion in ireland and singapore to help refine the analysis his study shows that two factors in particular are critical first is the government s autonomy from special interest groups both domestic and foreign arising from the level of political security enjoyed by government leaders the second factor is the government s ability to learn about prospective investors and the inducements that are most important to them what he calls transnational learning capacity nelson draws lessons from his analysis for how governments might develop more effective strategies for attracting nontraditional fdi
